Soon Forgotten.

Still Fighting Religion.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

QUICKLY WE FORGET. Ninety-two years old, the Spanish general Weyler, died in Madrid. Ask any man under 40 "who was Weyler?" He won't know.

But when the Spanish War was on, with Roosevelt climbing San Juan Hill, or a hill in the neighborhood, and Hobson sinking the Merrimac, everybody knew Gen. Weyler. We even called that mild old Spaniard "the butcher," in our patriotic war dance.

THE ILLNESS of which Gen. Weyler died started in a fall from his horse on his ninety-second birthday. Few Americans are on horseback at 92.

Luigi Cornaro wrote to his archbishop at 94 that he still mounted his horse without assistance and "I had to live to be 90 to know that the world is beautiful."

THE BROTHER of the Japanese Emperor took his wife to the opera in Germany and obtained a "close up" on Western civilization.

The opera was called "The Rise and Fall of the City Mahogany."

Members of a Fascist mob yelled "Hail, Hitler," and "Germany awake." To make sure that Germany would awake they threw bombs, unpleasantly described in the Associated Press dispatch as "stink bombs."

They deserved the name, and drove the Japanese Prince and his wife from the opera.

AT THE SAME time in pleasant Stuttgart, another mob closed a Negro play called "Shadows Over Harlem."

The play described "oppression and exploitation of Negroes in the United States."

CAPT. HAWKS, champion American pilot, on Sunday flew 70 miles in 17 minutes. Looking down on the congested highways, he calculated that by automobile the trip would have taken four hours, dodging in and out, waiting for lights.

A SPEED better than four miles a minute is a long step toward solving the transportation problem.

It would mean crossing the ocean in about 12 hours. That will come in a year or two and Capt. Hawks may make the flight. He is our flying champion now.

THE VATICAN receives word, via Berlin, that two Roman Catholic priests have been executed in Russia, Msgr. John Roth Dean, and Father Jacob Wolf. If true, this makes it plain that prayers, so numerously uttered, have not changed Russia's attitude on religion. But time, if not prayer, will convince Russia that fighting religion does not pay.

MOSCOW REPORTS officially the execution of one man and the jailing of 74 others for "graft in food and clothing sales." The man executed and the 74 jailed speculated in food and clothing prices. Russia deals with such enterprises vigorously.

TURKISH MERCHANTS traveling in an out-of-the-way part of Mexico report discovery of a strange tribe, living in inaccessible mountains, speaking an Oriental language resembling Arabic.

They have Oriental customs and no trace of Mayan civilization.

The immigrants may have been of many Asiatic branches, Semitic, Mongolian and others.

HAECKEL BELIEVED that men appeared on different parts of the earth, coming up from various pithecoid ancestors, thus creating different races.

Mongolians, according to one authority, came from the orang-outang, Africans from the gorilla, Caucasians from the chimpanzee.

THE GOVERNMENT of France opens war on stock market riggers and warns of punishment. When the French say it, they mean it.

Long ago some Frenchmen speculated in wheat, making bread so dear the poor couldn't eat it. The French government did not say "naughty, naughty" and let it go at that. They passed a law, and enforced it, sentencing to hard labor in prison anybody speculating for an increase in food products.

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S committee met yesterday to discuss relieving unemployment. It is a difficult problem, and can be solved only by making business men feel that they can profitably employ men.

The government may spend a few extra hundred millions, and give work to a limited number, machinery doing most of the work that government undertakes. Unfortunately, the adding of extra millions to taxes discourages business men, and, tends to increase lack of employment.

100 Killed in German Mine Blast

GAS, PETROL, DYNAMITE EXPLODE

Mine Authorities Admit Final Check May Show More Workmen Trapped

BERLIN, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—The official Prussian government press bureau announced tonight that approximately 100 men perished in a dynamite, oil and gas explosion today in the Anna coal mine at Alsdorf.

Possibility that 100 or even more had lost their lives was admitted by the management of the mine this evening after 50 dead had been brought out of the wrecked shaft.

It now appears that there were three explosions. The first was a gas explosion underground which caused dynamite stores to blow up in one of the shafts. This in turn caused the explosion of petrol tanks in a building on the surface.

The victims were buried in the wreckage spread by the blast through two levels 1,200 and 1,500 feet below the surface.

The Prussian trade ministry this afternoon dispelled earlier reports of more serious losses, some ranging as high as 2,000 casualties, with the explanation that when the workers who escaped fled from the mine they dashed straight for their homes in bewilderment without punching the time clock.

The management stated that rescue progress would be slow because the main entrance to the mine had been made impassable by the explosion and that the victims must be carried to shafts of the Maria Mine several miles away by an underground route.

'BUGS' MORAN CAPTURED

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—George (Bugs) Moran, former North Side gangland ruler and rival of Al Capone, was arrested early today at Cassidy's roadhouse, 15 miles west of here. Moran, alone when a constable and five private detectives surprised him, offered no resistance.

Immediately after his apprehension, Moran was hustled to Waukegan, where he was held in $50,000 bonds on a vagrancy charge.

ADD WEAPON CHARGE

Col. A. V. Smith, state's attorney for Lake County, said that a charge of carrying concealed weapons would also be lodged against Moran, who disputed with Capone forces control of Chicago's gangland enterprises until his mob

Woman Golf Champ Denies Betrothal

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21.—(INS.)—Rumors of a romance between Glenna Collett, noted woman golf champion, and an unnamed suitor today were declared by Miss Collett to be unfounded. She said:

"They're all quite thrilling—these rumors. Some of the young men who have been mentioned are most interesting. But really, at the present moment, I have no altar engagements with any of them."

PAULINE FREDERICK

ACTRESS GIVEN SPEED TAG

TULARE, Cal., Oct. 21.—(INS.)—Traffic Officer Mike Grady put on a great burst of speed and overtook two racing motor cars.

A man, at the wheel of one, said he was Minor Monroe, 43, of San Bernardino, and he got a tag for doing 65.

"Seems to me I've seen you some place," remarked Grady as he made out the other ticket. "What's your name?"

The answer, in a particularly demure voice, was:

"Pauline Frederick."

Demure or not, she got a tag for 70. Both were ordered to appear before a justice of the peace here October 24.

Miss Frederick, who said she was 42 and lived in Beverly Hills, was en route from her home to San Francisco where she opened a new show.

Pacific Flier Sails Home, to Try Again

YOKOHAMA, Japan, Oct. 21.—(INS.)—Lieut. Harold Bromley, well-known Pacific Coast flier, sailed for Tacoma, Wash., today aboard the liner President Jefferson. He told International News Service he planned to return to Japan in April for another attempt to fly the Pacific.

BUILD NEW SCHOOLS ON SAME TAX

Budget Shows Nearly Five Millions for Construction; Plan to Speed Contracts

The Board of Public Education will have $4,781,785.19 to spend on school construction during 1931, according to a budget statement presented to the Board's Committee on Finance and Administration today. Approval of this clause in the new budget is expected by many to be followed by a hastening of construction as the school system's contribution to unemployment relief.

No increase in the school tax levy is expected during the year, in spite of an increase of $407,736.99 in the appropriation asked. Increased income from miscellaneous sources is expected to make up for the added costs.

PAYROLL 11 MILLIONS

Thte largest item on the 87-page printed budget is the annual payroll of $11,231,470.98, an increase of $358,874.14 over the 1930 appropriation. The figure, an explanatory statement says, represents the cost of additional employes required to take care of the growth in the school system, automatic salary increases according to state law, and increases above the state maximum for meritorious work by teachers.

An estimated increase of $36,148 for supplies is caused by additional electric current, needed repairs and expansion of manual training facilities in the trade schools, necessitating increased purchases of tools. Fuel requirements, however, will be $16,810 less than called for in the 1930 budget.

Acoustic improvements in various school auditoriums will cost about $10,000, it is estimated.

DEBT PAYMENTS

Debt and interest payments will be increased by the cost of a new $3,000,000 bond issue and decreased by payments during 1930 on former bond issues. The net increase will be $9,805.75.

The $4,781,785.19 building fund is split, in the proposed budget, between new school buildings and repairs to old. The $3,000,000 new bond issue and $1,112,585.19 available from previous bond issues will make possible expenditures of the total amount on new buildings. In addition, there is the repairs and building improvement program provided for in the

"Baering" Down On the News With Arthur "Bugs" Baer

We know why Republicans are bolting their organization. It's not because they fear reform inside the party.

They fear reform anywhere.

We know why Democrats jump their reservation. They can't stand the loneliness.

Is it worse to be a Republican and be questioned all day by the grand jury or to be a Democrat and have nobody to talk to?

Why all this exodus of panicky politicians? There is a reason for everything, as the old lady said when she sat on the gummed label all day to keep its edges from curling.

Rats desert a sinking ship. But why should a mouse leave a yacht?

All this bolting must be due to the confusion. Nobody knows what's what or who's when. Politics is so erratic that a man starts out to do his Christmas shopping and winds up with a firecracker that he's arrested for shooting off on the Fourth of July.

The campaign oratory has started. The best you can hope for is static all over the dial.

Nation Unites in Campaign To Aid Jobless; Cities Back Hoover Program

International News Service.

The first icy breath of winter resulted today in a concerted national campaign to produce employment and relief for the sufferers.

While a committee of President Hoover's cabinet met in Washington to prepare a program for speeding up the government's half a billion dollar building program, the municipal councils in many large cities were adopting emergency measures to cope with the situation.

SPEED PUBLIC WORKS

For the most part, it appeared, these measures will nave to do with increasing and accelerating public works, cutting through red tape and the inevitable legal delays to the end that immediate work may be offered to the jobless.

"Provide work" seemed to be the national slogan, radiating downward from the Federal government, through the state governments and into the various municipalities.

A survey of the country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, revealed there is scarcely a city or community not alive to the unemployment situation as winter prepares to dig in.

SNOW FLURRIES FALL HERE

A trace of snow, the first of the season, was noted downtown this afternoon as the record cold continued its grip on Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania. The snowfall here would be negligible, the weather bureau said.

A temperature of between 25 and 30 degrees was predicted for tonight.

SNOW IN NORTH

The low temperature this morning was 32, six degrees higher than yesterday. Temperatures were slightly higher in the Middle West, but a vast high pressure area was still centered over the plains with the result that continued cold weather may be expected for at least a day or two, Forecaster W. S. Brotzman said.

Snow was falling in Northwestern Pennsylvania, according to reports. Skies were clear to the westward and will remain unclouded here, Brotzman stated.

800 IN HOME

Hundreds of unemployed men were sheltered in charitable institutions last night. Eight hundred men were cared for at the "Helping Hand" in Water street, while many more were sheltered by the Home for the Improvement of the Poor and other organizations.

PRISONERS OFF FOR U. S. JAILS

Nineteen government prisoners were placed aboard a train at the Pennsylvania Railroad Station this morning, 16 for the government penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga.; two for the United States Reformatory at Chillicothe, O., and one for Jacksonville, Fla., where he is under indictment.

United States Marshal J. C. McGregor and Deputy Marshals D. A. Goldman and J. F. Austin had charge of the prison party, assisted by special guards. The prisoner for Jacksonville was Charles I. Bentley, apprehended three weeks ago in Pittsburgh as a fugitive from justice.

Among the prisoners for the Atlanta penitentiary was Orman L. Dean, former cashier of the First National Bank at Conneautville, Pa., to serve three years for

PRESIDENT'S 'HANDS OFF' IN STATE FIGHT

White House Contradicts Nominee's Statement Of Promised Support

President Hoover was drawn into the maelstrom of Pennsylvania politics today when Gifford Pinchot, Republican candidate for governor, told an audience in Washington, Pa., that the President had sent word by one of his cabinet officers that he "stands for and desires the election of the whole Republican ticket."

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, Republican candidate for United States Senator, who has been campaigning with Pinchot, apparently was the "cabinet officer" to whom Pinchot referred.

Pinchot's Washington, Pa., address no sooner had been delivered, however, than prompt denial was made in Washington, D. C., by both Mr. Hoover and Mr. Davis.

Other developments in the campaign today were:

1—State political leaders at Harrisburg were speculating over State Chairman Martin's announcement that W. L. Mellon is supporting "the entire ticket."

2—Pinchot was returning to Pittsburgh for conferences tonight after addresses in Western Pennsylvania communities in which he continued his assault on public utilities which charge unfair rates.

3—John M. Hemphill, Democratic-Liberal candidate, recovered from slight illness, was en route to rejoin his campaign party in Erie.

Scalpers Boosting Notre Dame Tickets

With the Pitt-Notre Dame football game at the Stadium Saturday a sellout, ticket scalpers, it was reported have started operating around hotels, and other places where crowds gather.

Inspector of Detectives Frank R. Boyd and Inspector Albert Beebe of the First police district today instructed their men to be on the lookout for scalpers. Baronet-Benedict Facing Non-Support Charge

BOSTON, Oct. 21.—(INS.)—An unromantic deputy sheriff will be waiting at the dock for Sir John Harry Lee Fagge, one-time Pepperell chore man, when he and his bride arrive here this week on the liner Scythia.

Sir John, whose sudden rise to fame and fortune began last winter when he was notified that he had become tenth baronet of Stury, Kent, England, and had some $22,000 in cash, will be served with a summons to answer charges of non-support, brought by his 16-year-old daughter, Harriet Gertrude, who has been living with her grandmother in Charlestown.

Family Destitute, Buries Child in Yard

County detectives today uncovered a case of extreme distress when they found the family of Steve Spoorer, of near Warrendale, consisting of the parents and 12 children, aged 4 months to 14 years, without food or fuel and with scarcely enough clothing to cover them.

The detectives were called to the place by a report that the father had buried a child in the yard of the farm home. They reported this to be true, but found no criminal intent or carelessness.

Twins came to the Spoorer home on June 24, only one of which lived. The father said he had no money for an undertaker, so he conducted the other's funeral himself. The living twin is in Allegheny Hospital, and when the detectives arrived at the home, they found the mother, who is only 38, starting to walk the 19 miles to the hospital to see her baby.

Spoorer said he was induced to go to the farm by the owner last June, but having no tools or money, was unable to raise anything for his family. Recently the owner has asked the family to move, the detectives said, and school authorities have threatened Spoorer for not sending his children to school. Without shoes or clothing, the father said this was impossible.

George W. Murren, chief of county detectives, has reported the case to the county poor authorities.

YOUNGSTOWN MERGER VOTE ASSAILED BY DAY AS ILLEGAL

SHEET, TUBE APPROVAL DENIED

International News Service.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Oct. 21.—The right of Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company stockholders, as of March 22, 1930, to vote at the special stockholders' meeting, April 8, if they had sold their stock in the meantime, was disputed by Luther Day, chief counsel for the plaintiffs in the injunction suit against the merger of Sheet and Tube with Bethlehem Steel Corporation, as he continued his closing argument today.

Day contended that it is contrary to the intent of the Ohio corporation code to permit stockholders of record of a certain date to vote at a later date, if in the meantime they have sold their holdings.

INTEREST LOST

Day, who began his closing argument yesterday at the reopening of the trial in Common Pleas Court here after an adjournment of three weeks, following the completion of the taking of testimony, maintained that stockohlders who have sold their holdings have no interest at law in the corporation, and should have no decision as to its disposal.

The attorney's contention that the stockholders of Sheet and Tube voted illegally for the merger at the special meeting on April 8, is regarded as one of the most important points raised in the entire trial, which has been under way for more than three months.

Some 60,000 shares of stock which were sold after the date of record and voted by the original owners, according to the testimony, are in question.

VOTE QUESTIONED

The merger would be automatically invalidated should the plaintiff in the case, Cyrus S. Eaton, be sustained in the contention made by Attorney Day, it is believed. The merger, testimony in the case revealed, was approved by only 57,000 votes in excess of the necessary two-thirds required by law.

A contrary interpretation of the code, Day declared, would be in conflict, "Not only with the common law, but with the Constitution of Ohio and the Constitution of the United States."

In his argument, Day cited examples of decisions in other court cases. He indicated that the case would be fought by his client, Eaton, "to the United States Supreme Court, if necessary."

Day was scheduled to complete his argument before the adjournment today, to be followed on the floor by Clan Crawford, another Eaton attorney.

was weakened by the St. Valentine's Day massacre and later by numerous defections to his opponent.

Col. Smith said the Lake County authorities had sought Moran and Leo Mongoven, his bodyguard, for months. Mongoven, according to some stories, was supposed to have been slain and his body secretly disposed of by gang enemies, but the Lake County prosecutor said his information indicated that Mongoven was still living and had been with Moran only recently at Bemidji, Minn.

Both Moran and Mongoven were among the 28 men listed some time ago by the Chicago Crime Commission as "public enemies."

The Cassidy resort on Bluff Lake, where Moran was captured, has frequently seen his visits, according to Col. Smith. Previous attempts to ensnare Moran at the resort failed, but a force of private detectives led by Constable George Streidt surprised Moran at 2 a. m. today and ended the hunt which has engaged not only the authorities of Lake County and Chicago, but also, it is reported, big gangsters hostile to Moran.

QUIZZED ON MURDERS

Col. Smith said that Moran would be questioned about the slaying of Joe Bertche, Sam Pellar and Frank Quirk at Cross Lake, also in Lake County, last May 31. The three were shot to death supposedly by gangland enemies.

of $100,000 to be administered by such organizations as the Red Cross, Salvation Army and Catholic Charities, while municipal authorities contemplated ways and means of providing more permanent relief in the form of jobs.

In New York, a fund of more than $5,000,000 was being raised to prove opportunity and relief.

In Boston, the City Council visited Gov. Allen to discuss the situation, after recommending appropriation of $1,000,000 by the city and $2,000,000 by special subscription to get things started.

CHICAGO BUSY

Chicago was busy with plans for raising a huge fund of $12,000,000, while at the same time state and city committees were formulating plans for housing, food and employment for the economic unfortunates.

In San Francisco, the City Council authorized new sewer and street work to the extent of $750,000 as an emergency measure.

In Iowa, jobs were provided for 1,500 men by the inauguration of three oil pipe lines across the state.

Kansas City's municipal council voted to speed up all public works and adopted 12 ordinances to that end.

Hoover Commission Estimates Unemployed at 3,500,000

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—(INS.)—After a two-hour cabinet session, mostly devoted to discussing the severe unemployment situation, it was announced today that Congress will be asked to cut red tape to permit the acceleration of federal public works, and that Col. Arthur Woods, former police commissioner of New York, has been designated by President Hoover as the chief co-ordinator o fthe government's campaign to provide jobs for the unemployed.

Agreement apparently was reached by President Hoover and his advisers that the chief function that can be performed by the federal governmnt at this critical time is to proceed with all possible federal projects at this time, and to try to co-ordinate the efforts of federal, state and municipal agencies for relief.

It was estimated at today's session of the Hoover cabinet commission that there are now 3,500,000 workless wage-earners in the country. This is approximately 1,000,000 more than was "estimated" by the Census Bureau last April.

In its plans to speed up the $500,000,000 federal public works program, it was admitted that the government is hampered somewhat by the limitations imposed by Congress. Removal of some of these limitations will be the subject of communication from the White House when Congress convenes.

Central Bureau for Job Relief Planned Here

Centralized bureau to distribute relief to the unemployed in Pittsburgh is in the making, following the passage by Council of a $100,000 emergency ordinance.

Directed by Mrs. Enoch Rauh, head of the Department of Welfare, the fund is to be distributed by the American Red Cross, Salvation Army and other welfare agencies.

Existing agencies will provide for workers to handle the fund, the entire amount going to relief. Meanwhile plans for the employment of 700 additional city laborers at $4.40 a day each continued. The first group will be put to work this week.

STUDY SYSTEMS OF MARKETING

Distribution problems for the manufacturer were studied by delegates to the consumer marketing conference of the American Management Association at its second day's session in the William Penn Hotel.

Systems are changing and the manufacturer today seems faced with finding the speediest method to reach the consumer in the opinion of Dr. Harry R. Tosdal, professor of marketing, Harvard University. He said that marketing functions cannot be eliminated but a more direct and simple set-up for performing these functions will be the outcome.

Problems related to their own industries were discussed by Paul G. Hoffman, vice president, Studebaker Corporation of America; H. R. Lane, vice president, the Kendall Company; W. M. Zintl, paint division manager, E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.; H. W. Dodge, general sales manager, the Texas Company, and other leaders.

Declaring that the word wholesaler has taken a new meaning, E. M. West, market advisor, led a discussion on the selection of a wholesaler.

budget, requiring $669,200 for such work as carpentry, electric work, roofing, painting, plastering, cementing, plumbing, furniture and general repairs.

Division of the present school tax levy of 11¾ mills is set by the budget at 7 mills for teachers' salaries, 2 mills for debt principal and interest, 2¾ mills for all other purposes. Increased income and savings in 1930 expenditures will take care of the increased budget needs without tax increase, it is estimated.

TO DISCUSS BUDGET

The committee on finance and administration, under the chairmanship of N. R. Criss, will discuss the proposed budgets during night meetings in October and November.

Contract plans for the new Arsenal School, estimated to cost $850,000, were approved at a meeting last night of the property and supplies committee. Early beginning of building operations will depend on whether satisfactory bids on the electrical work can be obtained, it was said.

The proposed Arsenal School will occupy the site of the present Arsenal Trade School, at Butler and Fortieth streets. An athletic field, to cost $100,000, is included in future plans.

BAKER MURDER TRIAL OPENS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Herbert M. Campbell, Virginia real estate dealer, came to trial today in the District of Columbia Supreme Court, charged with the murder of Mary Baker, Navy Department clerk.

Miss Baker's body was found near Arlington National Cemetery on the morning of April 12.

The case against Campbell rests largely upon the statement by two ballistics experts that his .32-caliber revolver fired the shots found in the girl's body.

Campbell himself is responsible for the theory that his gun was used in the murder and is responsible also for directing suspicion to himself. He delivered the weapon to officers, telling them he suspected an itinerant painter, Herman Barrere, of stealing it abont the time the girl was killed and then returning it.

Barrere was arrested in Montreal. After he told his story he was no longer a suspect, but a prospective witness. Campbell's arrest followed.

OPPOSE CHANGE IN BUS ROUTE

The application of the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company to alter its route between this city and Charleroi to include Monessen, was heard today by Examiner W. E. Best, of the Public Service Commission.

Opposing the proposed modification are the West Penn bus line, which operates over a part of the route and the Monongahela Transit Company, which has applied for the right to run buses from Pittsburgh to Uniontown, Pa.

Thomas W. Noonan, general manager of the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company, testified he did not consider that the West Penn company had prior rights in serving passengers between Monongahela and Donora, as his company was giving service first by trolley and later by bus.

Noonan said an hourly starting schedule would be observed instead of the present two-hour schedule.

Coolidge Urges Business Be Permitted Free Hand

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Oct. 21.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Anybody with any experience in public life can see that the next session of every legislative body in the country, from the Congress down, will be deluged with all kinds of proposed nostrums for preventing depressions in industry and agriculture with resulting unemployment. Already business is beginning to shudder at the prospect. Instead of being able to look to government generally for encouragement and relief, it recognizes that these proposals will be a deterrent to business recovery. At the bottom of all these measures will be found an appropriation carrying a large expenditure of public money which would result in more taxes. If business can be let alone and assured of reasonable freedom from governmental interference and increased taxes, that will do more than all kinds of legislation to relieve depression. Local governments are justified in spending all the money necessary for direct relief of distress. But the nation and the states will only increase the difficulties by undertaking to restore confidence through legislation. It will be the part of wisdom to give business a free hand to supply its own remedies. This is no time to take counsel of the legislative visionaries.

Novarro 'Played Dead,' Outsmarted Elsie Janis

By MARIAN RHEA.

International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Oct. 21.—Elsie Janis knows her jui jitsu, but when a man outsmarts her by playing dead—

"Well, it was just too bad for me when that happened," the famous actress and screen writer said today.

The subject—under discussion was the friendly scuffle between herself and Ramon Novarro, film star, in which Miss Janis suffered a dislocated shoulder. However, she said:

"My shoulder is all right now and I'm ready to lick Ramon next time.

"How did it all happen? Well, I'll tell you. Ramon and I were sitting on a piano bench in Lawrence and Grace Tibbets' home during a party the other night. We had been singing. Then Ramon made some little remark—I don't remember just what—and I said 'Aw go on home,' and gave him a little push.

"Of course, then he gave me a little push. I pushed him back and the first thing you know we were at it hot and heavy.

"We fell off the piano bench and I had him down, too, and was sitting very effectually on his stomach. Of course the victory seemed mine. But he 'played dead,' drat him, and when I was off guard he took me by surprise and I fell off on my shoulder.

"Even then it wouldn't have been so bad but I wouldn't say I was hurt and so he kept on pummeling me until my shoulder was completely dislocated."

All of those of the House of Savoy with their consorts will be present except the Prince of Udine who is representing the king at the Abyssinian coronation, and the Duke of Spoleto, who is still convalescent after a motor boat accident.

The Greek former royal family will be well represented. Prince Christopher, former husband of Mrs. William B. Leeds, will be there with his second wife, and the Princesses Catherina, Maria and Irene.

LILLIAN GISH . . . . SHE WEARS NATHAN'S PORTRAIT

GISH ROMANCE TALK REVIVED

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—(INS.)—Lillian Gish, wistful star of the stage and screen, arrived here today wearing a ring which revived reports of her engagement to George Jean Nathan, dramatic critic and champion of bachelorhood.

The ring, worn on Miss Gish's engagement finger, contained a stone on which Nathan's portrait was engraved. It was said Nathan was at the train to see her off when she left New York for this city. Miss Gish declined to be interviewed today, and her secretary would make no statement for her.

When Nathan's friend and fellow scorner of marriage, H. L. Mencken, recently changed his mind and married, he predicted that Nathan would be wed to Miss Gish before Christmas. The actress and Nathan, who have known each other for five years, have denied all reports of an engagement.

JEWS SCORE MANDATE POLICY

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE, Universal Service.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—"Betrayal of the Palestine mandate" is what the London headquarters of the world Zionist movement calls the British government's "statement of policy" on its mandatory rule in Palestine.

The statement was issued in the form of a "white paper" by the British colonial office last night.

From all parties of the Zionist movement, radical and conservative, the "white paper" is considered not only a repudiation of the Balfour declaration of 1917, under which a Jewish national home was guaranteed, but the biggest blow dealt Zionism since the beginning of the movement.

DR. WEIZMANN QUITS

After publication of the Colonial office's statement, Dr. Chaim Weizmann resigned as president of the World Zionists and the Jewish Agency for Palestine. In matters of the national home, both these agencies are recognized by the British government.

The government "white paper" commits Britain to the following:

1—Temporary suspension and permanent restriction of land purchases by Jews in Palestine.

2—Continued restriction of Jewish immigration.

3—Establishment of a legislative council in Palestine, which has been the chief contention of the Arab population; and

4—Limitation of the functions of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, which represents the Zionists and the national home project.

In an interview with Universal Service, Dr. Weizmann said:

"The government's statement of policy seems to have laid down the principle that every landless Arab family is entitled to be settled on the land.

"It is clear that so far-reaching and novel a principle is going beyond anything required or implied in the mandate, and will seriously hamper the development of the national home."

AGENCY HEAD BITTER

Vladimir Jabotinsky, head of the executive committee of the Zionist Revisionists, an ultra-radical body, severely critical of the World Zionists as "too complacent to the British mandatory government of Palestine," said to Universal Service:

"The Jewish Agency is hereby deprived of all rights and prerogatives clearly laid down in the mandate.

"The government has surrendered to the Arabs the machinery of government, by admitting them to the legislative assembly, in whose hands will be placed effective methods of arresting the full establishment of the Jewish national home."

The government's action today, Dr. Weizmann said, is a profound change of policy since 1922 and goes a long way toward denying the rights of the Jewish people. He warned, too, that Jewish capital will be withheld from Palestine if immigration is restricted and called the "white paper" a violation of the Balfour declaration.

Leader Here Sees Zionist Salvation in Resignation Of Weizmann

Louis Altman, of Detroit, who will discuss the Palestine situation at a Jewish meeting tonight, said today:

"The resignation of Dr. Chain Weizmann as president of the World Zionist Organization will be the salvation of the Zionist movement."

Altman, a leader of Revisionist-Zionists, strongly opposes the Weizmann policies and feels that the Palestine situation will be solved with the election of Vladimini Jabotinsky, the probable candidate for the office of president of the Zionists and who is a Revisionist advocate.

Altman said:

"The Revisionists' policy is the only possible solution and interpretation of the term 'National Home' as declared in the Balfour Declaration. All other interpretations are consequently invalid."

The Revisionist advocates feel that the British government has been decidedly two-faced in its dealings with the Jews. There are 600,000 Arabs in the Palestine territory and there is a place for millions of Jews. The Zionists feel that the British government is being unfair to the Jewish people in an effort to be considerate of the Arabs.

Touching on Weizmann's resignation, he said:

"Mr. Weizmann's resignation has been expected. After the 1929 outbreak in Palestine a meeting of the extraordinary Zionists International Congress was held and it was thought best to demand that Weizmann resign. We are interested in the welfare of the Jewish people and our object is to make a safe home for those Jews in Eastern Europe who are living in poverty and want at the present time."

Altman will speak tonight at the "Y" lodge room, Bellefield avenue. The meeting will be under the auspices of the Maccabean Zion Camp, of which William Chif is president.

GLASS FOUND IN SUGAR AT DINNER

DENVER, Col., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Officers investigating the brutal murder of 10-year old Leona O'Loughlin, drowned in City Park Lake, apparently have unearthed evidence of an attempt to exterminate other members of the family.

While officers continued to question Mrs. Leo O'Loughlin, stepmother of the child who was fed ground glass, beaten unconscious and thrown in a lake to drown, Leona's 74-year-old grandfather, Dennis O'Loughlin, made his appearance in the investigation.

GLASS IN SUGAR

He told officers he had found glass in the sugar served at a dinner at his home in Fort Collins, Col., six weeks ago.

Leo O'Loughlin, father of the slain girl, is recovering from the effect of eating ground glass.

Investigators said it was established the glass in the sugar bowl at the Fort Collins dinner and that found in the slain girl and her father was identical.

The boy, the slain girl, Mr. and Mrs. O'Loughlin, Mrs. Marybelle Shannon, a sister of Mrs. O'Loughlin, and Frank O'Loughlin, brother of the detective, all were at the Fort Collins dinner party.

STEP-MOTHER FIRM

Repeated questions of the stepmother resulted in her constant denials of any part in the death of the girl.

Detective O'Loughlin, who was taken to the hospital seriously ill last week, was not informed of the death of his daughter until yesterday, although he was aware of her disappearance. He also was advised of his wife's arrest in connection with the case.

DIAMOND FIGHTS TO GO HOME

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—(INS.)—Attorneys for Jack "Legs" Diamond today were reported making plans to seek a writ of habeas corpus in an effort to have the gangster removed from the Metropolitan Hospital.

He wants to go to his summer home at Acra, N. Y., it is reported, but police, it is said, have no intention of letting him out of the city.

WAR IN BRAZIL HALTED BY RAIN

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 21.—(INS.)—Heavy downpours have temporarily halted troop movements in the Sao Paulo-Parana battle area, offering federals and rebels alike the opportunity today to recuperate from recent heavy action.

The main federal fighting branches at present remained concentrated in the cities of Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo. The former has 20,000 reservists under arms; the latter, 10,000. Other loyal states continued to swell the training camps with additional men, forcing the government in some cases to refuse further applicants for army service.

INHALATOR AIDS STRICKEN GIRL

East Liberty police received a call early today from Tony Melora, of 6432 Maromas street, asking that an inhalator be rushed to his home to relieve his daughter, Lucy, 7, who, the father said, had difficulty in breathing.

Wagonman Edward Kilpatrick and Policeman Joseph Thompson took the machine to the Melora home and operated it until the arrival of Gus McClelland, operator for the Mine Safety Appliance Company.

The family physician was called and said the child was suffering from a nervous affection which interfered slightly with respiration, but that she was in no danger.

PAIR FACING 300 CHECK CHARGES

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Two men said by police to be members of a forgery ring which operated from Chicago to New York and from the Canadian border to New Orleans, today faced 300 charges of forgery, first degree, and grand larceny, first degree, part of them for operations here.

The men—Harry Munson, alias Benjamin Miller, and Walter Marks—were arrested Friday after a forged check bearing the signature of a prominent society leader in this city had been cashed.

The check was for $1,000 and police said Munson, when arrested, had a similarly forged check for $2,000.

Information furnished by the detectives making the arrests resulted in the arrest of three other persons in Cleveland, also accused of being members of the alleged forgery ring.

Meanwhile, police here were deluged with requests from authorities in Pittsburgh, Boston, Columbus, New Orleans, Atlanta, Chicago, Oak Park, Cleveland, New York, Detroit and Erie, Pa., asking that the men be turned over to them for prosecution in connection with similar forgeries.

Scientists on South Sea Isle Wait Eclipse Today

NIUAFOU ISLAND, Oct. 21.—(Universal.)—A 100-mile-wide path of darkness across the Pacific ocean from the island of Paupa to the Black Hills of Terra Del Fuego and Cape Horn will be spread today by the moon when it crosses the face of the sun, creating a total eclipse.

The solar orb, center of the planetary system, will be "shut" for 93 seconds, and during that time will be photographed in all its stages by scientific expeditions here from New Zealand and the United States Naval Observatory.

Weather conditions are said by the scientists to be extremely favorable for the photographic and spectrographic work which will be all-important today.

The scientists for some time feared this might be another of the years in which earthquakes have disturbed the South Sea islands, but so far have not been interrupted in their work by temblors which would have disturbed their delicate instruments.

Mary Garden to Take 'Tea' At Home of Texas Critic

AMARILLO, Tex., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Any disagreement in other years between Mary Garden, operatic star, and Gene Howe, Amarillo newspaperman, apparently was ended.

Miss Garden has accepted an invitation to visit Mr. and Mrs. Howe in their home when she sings in Amarillo in concert on November 3. Howe invited her to "an old-fashioned Texas supper."

"I will be very happy to accept your invitation to tea at your villa," Miss Garden wired.

"If it's tea and not a supper she wants, it's tea she will have," Howe said. "Mrs. Howe and I are doing our best to convert our bungalow into a villa."

After a visit of Miss Garden to Amarillo with an opera company, Howe criticized her singing and a number of exchanges between them were made through the press.

sires the election of the whole Republican ticket."

Pinchot drew the mantle of presidential favor around his shoulders at the very moment bolting Republican foes were planning a counter announcement placing Mr. Hoover in the attitude of desiring Mr. Pinchot defeated.

The Republican nominee, however, asserted that he stood in the President's favor and that the revolt of Republicans to the Liberal party standard of John M. Hemphill, Democratic nominee, was "in open opposition to the wishes of the President."

ASSAILS VAUCLAIN

WHITE HOUSE DENIAL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—(INS.)—Prompt denial was made at the White House today that President Hoover had "sent any word of any kind into Pennsylvania" as to what he did or did not desire in the hectic gubernatorial contest in that state.

Mr. Hoover, it was stated, "is taking no part, directly or indirectly, in any state political campaign," and if one of his cabinet officers made such an announcement, it was unauthorized.

Secretary of Labor Davis was equally prompt with his denial today that he had carried any word of the President's preferences in Pennsylvania politics.

Davis did not amplify his denial at the White House, where he had been attending a cabinet meeting, but said he might have a formal statement later.

LIBERALS DENY CLAIM

HARRISBURG, Oct. 21.—(INS.)—Gifford Pinchot's claim of support by President Hoover today in Washington, Pa., brought a prompt contradiction at the headquarters here of the Liberal party. Composed entirely of Republicans who bolted to Hemphill.

One Liberal party leader declared that while the President would take no part in Pennsylvania's gubernatorial contest, he actually desired Pinchot's defeat. This leader declined to be quoted until after he could confer with other party leaders, but intimated a formal statement would be made later.

Martin States W. L. Mellon Is Supporting Pinchot

HARRISBURG, Oct. 21.—Capitol Hill is buzzing today with speculation over a statement by Gen. Edward Martin, Republican state chairman, declaring that W. L. Mellon is supporting the entire ticket headed by Gifford Pinchot for governor and James J. Davis for United States senator.

Martin delivered the message declaring Mr. Mellon to be supporting the entire Republican ticket yesterday at a meeting here with chairmen of practically every organization. He added:

"I have just had a telephone conversation with Mr. W. L. Mellon. He had expected to be here, but he is where he can do the greater service. He has made one statement after another. No one has been more helpful to me in this great crisis than Mr. Mellon.

GLICK SEES VICTORY

Martin's announcement of Mellon's support for Pinchot was made more significant by a statement by Peter J. Glick, of Pittsburgh, secretary of the State Department of Labor and Industry and chairman of the speakers' bureau of the Republican State Committee.

Glick stated that Allegheny County would give Pinchot a majority of at least 50,000. He said:

"That will be Pittsburgh's answer to the desertions in Philadelphia."

PINCHOT HERE TONIGHT IN VOTE DRIVE

McKeesport Fete Set for Friday Night; Campaign Climax Slated Saturday

Gifford Pinchot, Republican nominee for governor, was due to return here tonight after addressing meetings today in Waynesburg and Washington. He is scheduled to leave tomorrow for meetings in Kittanning and Butler.

Friday night Pinchot will be honor guest at a dinner in the Penn-McKee Hotel, McKeesport, arranged by State Senator W. D. Mansfield and other leaders of the Ninth Legislative District. A mass meeting will follow the dinner. Prior to the McKeesport visit, Pinchot will broadcast at 6:15 p. m. over KDKA.

SATURDAY MEETING

The high spot in the Western Pennsylvania campaign will be reached at 11:45 a. m. Saturday when all nominees on the Republican ticket are due to address an open-air meeting from the Grant street steps of the Court House.

Pinchot is expected to witness the Pitt-Notre Dame football game in Pitt Stadium in the afternoon and at night to be honor guest at a dinner in the William Penn Hotel under auspices of the Richard W. Martin Republican Association. Prior to the dinner, Pinchot will broadcast at 6:30 p. m. over KDKA.

Speakers at the dinner will include Judge John S. Fine, of Luzerne County; Judge James H. Gray, former Judge Frank I. Gollmar, former President of Council James F. Malone, Attorney Joseph H. Reich, Toastmaster John R. Frankel, the Rev. Dr. W. W. T. Duncan and the Rev. Dr. L. A. O'Connell.

Chairmen of Pittsburgh wards and leaders of legislative districts outside the city will continue the program inaugurated last week of holding meetings to further the candidacies of Pinchot and his running mates, according to William H. Ziefel, secretary of the Allegheny County Republican organization.

County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, Republican county chairman, who was confined to his home for a week with a cold, returned to his office yesterday and conferred with part, workers in the city and county districts.

Reports from the workers quote Armstrong and Mayor Charles H. Kline as making urgent requests for support for Pinchot and the entire ticket.

Crowd Hears Pinchot, Davis Talk in Charleroi Ball Park

CHARLEROI, Pa., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Gifford Pinchot, Republican gubernatorial candidate, and his campaign party left here early today on a tour which is to be punctured by stops at California, Fredericktown, Waynesburg, Amity and Washington. The party will spend the night in Pittsburgh.

The former governor spoke last night under the flood lights at the Mid-Atlantic League Baseball Park here and despite the chill air a large crowd turned out to hear him.

The Forester also renewed his attack on the Philadelphia "gang," repeated his pledge to abolish the coal and iron police system by next July 1, described his proposal for improvement of 20,000 miles of township highways and his program to "get to the bottom of the unemployment situation in the state."

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, candidate for the United States Senate, and others of the Republican ticket also made addresses.

Former Gov. John K. Tener, who resides here, spoke briefly, lauding Pinchot and others on the ticket and urging support of the entire slate.

STATE W. C. T. U. FOR PINCHOT

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Oct. 21.—Through delegates assembled at the state conference here today, 50,000 members of the W. C. T. U. in Pennsylvania pledged their support to Gifford Pinchot in the coming election. The pledge came in the adoption of the platform of the organization.

The platform emphasized the strict observance of the Sabbath, support of newspapers that stand for righteousness and truth, condemned the papers that are "detrimental to the morals of our children and unfit for our home and those that take an unfair view of the Eighteenth Amendment," and the regulation of motion pictures to conform with high standards of decency and morality.

'TALKIEGRAMS' QUICK SUCCESS

"Talkiegrams" have taken Pittsburgh by storm. Last night the new Sun-Telegraph game took its place among the newest and most fascinating of indoor sports. In hundreds of homes, old and young sat around the tables with the picture theater advertising page of the Sun-Telegraph spread out, all intent upon creating a "Talkiegram" that would win a share of the $25 in cash prizes or a pair of the 100 motion picture theater tickets to be given away every day.

It's an easy game and creates loads of fun. And what a thrill when you finish a "Talkiegram" that looks as though it might win a prize.

The Sun-Telegraph "Talkiegram" game has just started. It has caught the popular fancy of Sun-Telegraph readers and this popularity is going to spread like wildfire.

There is a $10 prize for the best "Talkiegram" submitted every day, $5 for the second best, $3 for the third, $2 for the fourth and five prizes of $1 each. And every day there will be 100 tickets for the best motion picture theaters given away—two tickets for each winner.

Get in the "Talkiegram" game today. You'll find instructions and a "Talkiegram" blank on page 27 of today's Sun-Telegraph.

CURTIS BOLTS PINCHOT CAMP

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Another break in party lines in Pennsylvania's gubernatorial campaign developed today with the declaration of Cyrus H. K. Curtis, Philadelphia publisher, last night that he would not vote for Gifford Pinchot, Republican nominee.

Mr. Curtis made his declaration at a dinner given by Samuel M. Vauclain, chairman of the board of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, and B. Dawson Coleman, vice chairman of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, to prominent industrial and business leaders of Pennsylvania.

"My objection to Mr. Pinchot," Mr. Curtis said, "is that he has always been a trouble-maker. He created trouble between President Roosevelt and President Taft. He created trouble in 1926 when he issued a certificate of doubt to William S. Vare.

"Pinchot never was a Republican. He plays with the radical elements of the Republican party. Over his own signature he denies his Republicanism and then yells for party regularity. I will not vote for him."

HEMPHILL JOINS CARAVAN

BRADFORD, Pa., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—With John M. Hemphill, Democratic-Liberal candidate for governor, en route to rejoin the campaign party, the campaigners headed today toward Erie.

Sedgwick Kistler, nominee for United States senator, and other candidates heartened by word that Hemphill, who had to give up the trip yesterday because of a severe cold had recovered and would go to Erie by train, joined forces at Kane early today and struck westward toward Erie.

Several stops will be made in Warren and Erie counties and the night will be spent in the lake city.

In his prepared address, read by Mayor Spencer M. De Golier, a Republican, Hemphill had attacked Pinchot as a "centralizer of state government.

SCHACHT HINTS MORATORIUM

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Dr. Hialmar Schacht, former president of the Reichsbank, in an address before the Foreign Policy Association last night, said unless other countries help Germany to extend her foreign trade she will be forced to proclaim a moratorium on reparations payments.

He predicted the time would come when Germany's creditors would realize that the collection of reparations payments was less profitable than Germany's commercial competition, and then would be ready to reopen the entire question. He asserted that under present circumstances Germany cannot continue to pay reparations.

MID-AFTERNOON FATIGUE CAN BE READILY OVERCOME

One Can Be Quickly Refreshed By Eating Something Sweet

Eating between meals is often prescribed by doctors, especially for those working at high speed in offices and stores.

Appropriate food for such "snacks" is easy to get anywhere. The popular candy bar and the little packets of sweet cookies are outstanding examples of what is offered. Then there are the soda fountains where milk drinks and carbonated beverages can be enjoyed.

Doctors and food scientists who have given candy or sweet flavored drinks to workers have discovered that these foods restore energy quickly. Even a glass of water sweetened with sugar has proved to be invigorating. The fact that the tests have been made in the late afternoon, when vitality is low, makes the results more significant.

Refined sugar, in addition to overcoming fatigue, can help in promoting a more satisfying diet. Those foods rich in vitamins, roughage and minerals can be much improved in flavor by adding a dash of refined sugar in cooking or when serving them. Good food promotes good health. The Sugar Institute.

WEYLER BURIED, AVOID CROWDS

MADRID, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—In a simple wooden casket, borne by a hired hearse, the body of Capt.-Gen. Valeriano Weyler, whose Cuban administration 30 or more years ago was one of the causes of the Spanish-American War, was taken today to its grave in San Lorenzo Cemetery, through a heavy downpour. There was only one carriage, containing relatives, in the funeral procession.

The burial ceremony at the Weyler home had been performed two hours earlier than scheduled to escape the gaze of crowds.

The bishop of Teneriffe said mass in a chapel improvised in Gen. Weyler's former workroom, where the body had been placed in a plain wooden coffin.

Best Remedy for Cough Is Easily Mixed at Home

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough or chest cold can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in millions of homes, because it gives more prompt, positive relief than anything else. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to make a full pint. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes good—children like it.

You can actually feel its penetrating, soothing action on the inflamed throat membranes. It is also absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. At the same time, it promptly loosens the germ-laden phlegm. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief even in severe bronchial coughs which follow cold epidemics.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

We Now Present

-:- By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

Mystery House, the exciting underworld melodrama, reaches a climax over WCAE at 11 o'clock . . . Another serial with the same characters will start next Tuesday . . . An Old-Time Medley on WCAE at 9:30 is bound to have many listeners this cold evening . . . The Philco Symphony, WJAS at 9:30, offers Liszt's "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2" —also Schubert's "Marche Militaire," and a radio premiere of Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Chanson Russe." . . . By request the Sacred Song artists will do "In the Garden" on KDKA at 7:30.

QUESTION A DAY:

I hear a "peep" sound on my radio several times a day. Is it something in the transmission?—Betty D., Perrysville.

Answer—Every time you hear that "peep" on KDKA you may rely it is exact time on the hour. The "peep" replaces the old gong that was used several times to imitate "Big Ben" of 2LO.

VK2ME at Sydney, Australia, called WGY this morning to tell them of Capt. Kingford-Smith's safe arrival in Brisbane after his triumphal airplane tour.

KDKA had the conversation through NBC. If transmission conditions are OK we shall hear the Captain himself tomorrow morning at 8.

The more we hear "Betty Co-ed," the more respect we have for her papa, "Washington and Lee Swing."

Ralph F. Everett, 414 Lobinger street, North Braddock—Both KQV and WJAS received the Tech-Notre Dame game by telegraphic report and embellished this account with phonograph records in downtown studios.

WSM told the world that Stephen Collins Foster was born in "Lawrenceville, Pa." Our historian, John P. Cowan, sez that's correct. Okey, Colonel!

We liked the exuberance of her remarks and the expressed desire to say little about herself.

Nearly every mode of transportation was used to get Elinor into the WEAF studio in time for the talk. She arrived 10 minutes before going on the air.

She arrived in St. Louis by airplane; there a train waited beyond schedule to waft her to Harrisburg, where she was given an amphibian plane to compiete the journey to New York. A motorboat in the harbor and a taxi were used before the trip ended.

* * *

The porter on the train said: "You are the most travelinst girl I has eber seen."

Sherlock Holmes left us with a creepy feeling. The character portrayal by William Gillette was excellent.

"BY THE WAY—"

Floyd Gibbons focuses his attention on Russia this Sunday night. . . . Billy Arzt, director of the Henry George Band on WJAS at 9, directed "Blossom Time," "Student Prince," "Love Song" and "Dream Girl" for the Shuberts. . . . David Ross is to supervise the premiere of Majestic's Old Curiosity Shop this Sunday . . . the scene is an antique shop kept by a kindly old philosopher. . . . He sits among his treasures and dreams of them to his daughter, bringing to the radio audience a storehouse not only on inanimate things, but of human passions, dreams, ambitions and sorrows . . . Synchronization tests by KDKA, WEAF and WGY, during which Pittsburghers heard the experimental call "WEXT" many times, were successful. Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of NBC, told the Radio Commission yesterday. . . . Synchronization will bring better programs on more channels, he said.

Smoke—"I'se the guy that wrote Annie Laurie."
Stubs—"No, you didn't write Annie Laurie."
Smoke—"Oh, yes, I did. But she didn't answer me."

Captain—"What do you think of those two girls over there? Aren't they beautiful?"
Captain—"Give her credit, she made it up herself."

WHY are Camels welcomed with cheers in any company—a twosome or a crowd? Because they're mild—not flat or tasteless but naturally mild. They have the marvelous aroma that only choice tobaccos, mellowed by golden sunshine, then expertly cured and superbly blended, can give a cigarette. There's nothing artificial about this delightful fragrance. No doctoring, no over-processing can produce it. Camel's refreshing mildness is there from the start.

Swing with the crowd to Camels. Learn the happy difference between true mildness and insipid flatness. Smoke without fear of throat-discomfort or after-taste—just for pleasure!

DWIGHT FEE — THE REV. JAMES R. COX

Managing Editor Fee of the Sun-Telegraph presenting Father Cox with the certificate of first place among Pittsburgh radio artists as a result of the Sun-Telegraph's September radio poll.

Father Cox Receives Winner's Certificate

A certificate awarding the Rev. James R. Cox first place as favorite Pittsburgh artist in the Sun-Telegraph Radio Poll was presented to him today at his study at Old St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church in Liberty avenue.

Father Cox, whose radio sermons and addresses are familiar to Pittsburgh listeners, received a total of 16,664 votes, nearly 10,000 more than his nearest competitor.

The presentation took place just before his noon broadcast over WJAS.

Presentation of similar certificates will be made this week to the other winners in the Radio Poll.

The Loudspeaker -:- By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Oct. 21. — The broadcasters are assuming more and more the aspect of news dealers. The hosts of the armchairs never know what is in store for them. They may plan a quiet evening with the professors of the saxophone, or the poets of the organ or even the philosophers of the harmonica, only to learn they are sharing in the making of spectacular news.

Louis Reid.

And by spectacular news the microphone men mean anything from airplane flights across the Atlantic to the prawings of the ponderous pelicans.

Though heavyweight bouts have not been plentiful on the air in recent months, they have not prevented the songwriters from turning out a tune called "It's in the Bag."

B. A. Rolfe has not yet broken faith with his musical philosophy that there shall be no crooning at the bar when he puts out on the radio sea. The republic should be grateful.

The most fruitful gossip mill in America is Washington, but we get none of its product in the microphonic menu. Only endless legislative plans, governmental reports, departmental statistics.

Networks Should Have McCormick-Lewis Fight

Of all the feminine figures in the political spotlight, Ruth Hanna McCormick enters most frequently into the calculations of the broadcasters. Great sense of publicity has Mrs. McCormick. She is to the American political scene what Lady Astor is to the British. I hope the radio men will let us have some of her campaign with Jim Ham Lewis this fall. Here would be soft, suave words—with a sting.

Trombones seldom penetrate the ear drums. How they flourished in the reign of Theodore the First! While with Sousa's Band, Arthur Pryor played more than 10,000 trombone solos. Today the trombone has given way to the musical saw.

The musicians' union will not recognize the saw as a musical instrument. And how, you ask, do the jazz jehovahs get around the labor problem? By having their saw players join the carpenters' union. Damn clever, the jazz jehovahs!

Mme. Schumann-Heink has become the leading patron of aspiring singers. Graham McNamee, Reinald Werrenrath and Julian Street, Jr., occupy the same office at the N. B. C. The most beautiful speaking voice, that has been recruited by radio from the stage—for these ears at least—is that of Pedro de Cordoba. Mimicry—what price television?—is becoming more and more common on the air. Strange no college cheering section has adopted "The Rangers Song" from "Rio Rita." The broadcasters have put their restless fingers upon every favorite ballad of the naive '90s. They have even dusted off "I Don't Want to Play in Your Yard."

'Uncles' Are Pied Pipers of Microphone

Broadcasters invariably call themselves "uncle" when they set out to amuse children. The best known "uncles" on the air are Uncle Don and Uncle Robert. Modern pied pipers, they have only to speak to lure a million muddy feet into the parlors.

The countryside has yet to learn of the activities of Hoover and his guests at Rapidan. How many trout does the President catch? What is the favorite breakfast dish? How long are matters of state discussed before the lights go out?

The English blues song, "Body and Soul," has reached an epidemic state on the microphone.

Mandolins and guitars are being assembled into one unit by the broadcasters. Put them all together and they should reach all the way to that beach at Waikiki.

Pickles are now being glorified on the air. Silence still greets hash and warmed up potatoes.

Operatic stars always find room for one old folk song in their radio recitals. Mary Garden invariably selects "Comin' Through the Rye;" Rosa Ponselle, "My Old Kentucky Home;" Alma Gluck, "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny," and Louise Homer, "Swanee River" . . . Wyoming has come in for a Tin Pan Alley tribute for the first time since the song "Cheyenne."

order if we'll ever hear a paen to Iowa? . . . Floyd Gibbons, it seems to me, is at his best when he describes the battles of the World War.

Whenever I seat myself before my crystal ball it invariably bids me to predict that Sir Harry Lauder's broadcasting fee of $15,000 a half hour will stand until the radio men sit down to a conference table with Wilhelm Hohenzollern.

CHILDREN CRY FOR IT!

FIVE million modern mothers will tell you that children DO cry for Fletcher's Castoria. For mothers always give a few drops of this pure vegetable preparation when a child has any of the symptoms that tell of sluggish bowels, colic, or other upsets. When tiny tongues are coated and breath is bad. When a child is restless; irritable. Always soothing and comforting to an infant—yet it is effective for children in their teens. You never have to coax children to take Castoria; they love its taste.

Be ready for the next case of sour stomach, constipation, or other need for Castoria!

RELIEF FOR STOMACH ILLS

And other health-destroying ailments that have kept thousands of sufferers in misery and despair now seen in modern discovery BLOOD CELL PROTEIN SERUMS. How little we think the stomach controls High Blood Pressure and most all supposedly incurable diseases! Every organ in the body receives its allowance and maintenance from the stomach. Why do we impose on it? Nobody cares much—because it has to take what you give it and say nothing until some future date. You get a message from the kidneys—Bright's Disease, Hardening of the Arteries; a message from the Heart—Myocarditis, with what you call Rheumatism produced by toxins in the blood stream; Stiff Joints and painful Muscles. The Liver always trying to do what the Stomach fails to accomplish. Give up the fight and the patient drifts into Anemia. The time has come to stop drugging and abusing this wonderful organ that can digest all but itself. Don't you believe it is time to give some special thought to these facts and eliminate this stomach drugging, which you know is wrong, neglecting the only sure and effective avenue of medication — the blood stream? BLOOD CELL PROTEIN SERUMS are used universally in the treatment of these supposedly incurable diseases (35,000 given in Pittsburgh past 7 years) and can be had only at the

Can your set meet this tone test?

IS the tone of your set merely pleasant, or gloriously true? Does it enable you to distinguish between instruments of similar tone quality—to hear vocal music reproduced without distortion over the entire tonal range? For example:

Do the kettledrums have a distinct pitch, or do they just sound like thuds? Does a man's voice give the impression his head is in a barrel? Can you distinguish the letter "S" in speech? In an orchestra, do you find several or only one violin playing the same part? Does the violin radiate brilliancy, or does it always sound muted?

Investigate the lifelike tone of the new Grebe before you buy. The famous 7-check test enables you to compare directly with any other set. Get a test list from your nearest Grebe dealer.

So when people who are getting along in years take the little daily dose of Kruschen, it carries to liver, kidneys, nerves, glands and to every internal organ a combination of six magical and rejuvenating salts that daily keep the system free from acid and harmful toxins.

When you take Kruschen Salts internal faults are corrected and blissful bowel regularity is yours—you obtain the same beneficial results that you would have to pay handsomely to get at the famous and expensive spas of Europe.

Petty and disturbing ailments such as headache, gas, dizzy spells and biliousness won't bother you and you will feel better, spryer and more forceful than you have for years.

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts 4 weeks costs but 85 cents—at any drug store in the world—take one-half teaspoon in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast.

STATE PUSHES TAX PENALTIES

The penalty of 12 per cent annually fixed by law on delinquent inheritance taxes will be strictly enforced hereafter, under a notice received by Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell from Charles Johnson, secretary of revenue of Pennsylvania. It has been the custom to waive the penalty in many cases.

The law provides the penalty commence one year after the death of the decedent upon the amount of inheritance tax then unpaid. Where any part of an estate cannot be settled within one year the interest rate is 6 per cent under the law, with the exception that the interest rate shall not exceed the income produced by the real or personal property involved in the delay.

Secretary Johnson also directed the 5 per cent discount on payment of inheritance tax be confined strictly within the period of three months from the date of death.

HOW TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

Makes One Look Younger

Men and women who used to be called Grandpa and Grandma are now setting the styles by darkening their gray hair at home.

For instance, J. A. McCrea, a well known Californian, recently made the following statement:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture in five minutes, that will darken gray hair and make it soft and glossy. Merely take a half-pint of water, add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at trifling cost. Apply to the hair twice weekly with a comb. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and will not rub off.

Poor complexion made smoother, clearer— overnight

—a nurse's secret

LONELY, unhappy — because you have a poor complexion? Then start right in getting a lovely one. Use the medicated beauty cream nurses advise.

Already, over 6,000,000 women have had amazingly quick success with this cream — just as you will. The minute you smooth it on, you feel your skin grow softer, smoother. Eight hours later, you see it is fresher, clearer!

The explanation is simple. Noxzema Cream contains healing oils that soften rough, scaly skin. Gentle astringents that shrink coarse pores and refine the texture of the skin. A mild medication that heals away marring blemishes and stimulates dull, sallow complexions to healthy, glowing beauty.

No matter how coarse-textured —how rough, broken-out with blemishes — your skin is, Noxzema will quickly beautify it. Try it just once — and you'll use it regularly. For one application of Noxzema will convince you that it is a real corrective cream.

Don't put off the happiness—the popularity—that a charming "come hither" complexion will give you. Get a generous trial jar of Noxzema Cream today.

Director:

"The most laudable service that any industry can render is the attempt to benefit its patrons. That is the cardinal principle of philanthropy. And so, interested as I always am in modern developments, I consider that your use of the Ultra Violet Ray in your Toasting of LUCKY STRIKE is a distinct contribution of which the public will wholeheartedly approve."

Consistent with its policy of laying the facts before the public, The American Tobacco Company has invited Mr. August Heckscher to review the reports of the distinguished men who have witnessed LUCKY STRIKE'S famous Toasting Process. The statement of Mr. Heckscher appears on this page.

LUCKY STRIKE—the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—THEN—"IT'S TOASTED." Everyone knows that heat purifies and so TOASTING removes harmful irritants that cause throat irritation and coughing. No wonder 20,679 physicians have stated LUCKIES to be less irritating! Everyone knows that sunshine mellows—that's why TOASTING includes the use of the Ultra Violet Ray.

FEAR BOB FLED FROM U.S.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—(INS.)—Believing that Charles V. Bob, missing New York financier and stock promoter, may have fled the country, the attorney general's office has asked the Department of State in Washington to check on passports issued recently.

Assuming that Bob did not use his own name, the department was asked to check by description and photograph.

Bob was last heard of October 12 in Chicago.

Gthering of new data in connection with the affairs of numerous companies of Bob caused a delay in plans of Assistant Attorney General Watson Washburn to ask a receivership for Metal and Mining Shares, Inc., said to be Bob's chief company, and other of his organizations. He said the receivership, however, would be requested today.

What other companies will be involved Washburn did not disclose.

Coming! Watch Tomorrow Night's Papers for Announcement of the Greatest Furniture Event of the Season!

Why be satisfied with ★ HALF A RADIO? ★

*Make the free home-test. Ask for a demonstration. Find out, without obligation, how to get all the performance your set can give

HAS your radio had a long, hard season? Have the passing months seemed to sap its punch, steal the sparkle from its tone? Still . . . you needn't miss a single note of the radio-pleasure to come . . . the winter ahead can be a revelation!

Ten to one, there's nothing wrong with your radio but its tubes. You can prove to yourself, at no cost, and without obligation, what a tremendous difference a set of new Eveready Raytheon Tubes will make. Instead of the flat, colorless, fuzzy sounds you may now be putting up with . . . vivid reality! Breath-taking realism . . . a new conception of what your set can do! Eveready Raytheons are a new and better tube made on a new scientific principle.

For a limited time only, any one of the dealers listed will demonstrate to you a set of Eveready Raytheon Tubes in your own radio at home. The demonstration costs you nothing. You will be under no obligation to buy. The makers of Eveready Raytheons, and these dealers, want you to know from personal experience what a tremendous difference exists between these tubes and any others you have ever used. And to realize, as well, what a fine musical instrument your present radio can be.

You can hear the difference and see the reason

The improvement with new Eveready Raytheons in your set is so startling that you will almost doubt your ears. However, behind this superior performance there is sound engineering design . . . you can actually see it inside any one of the tubes. It is the exclusive, patented Eveready Raytheon 4-Pillar construction, based on the same sound principles as the design of a radio-antenna tower, a windmill, and the eternal Pyramids of Egypt . . . which all have four points of support!

So with the elements in an Eveready Raytheon. Anchored more firmly, they retain the original, laboratory accuracy with which they are assembled. On the maintenance of this accuracy depends the performance of your set. Eveready Raytheon elements are supported at four points, by four strong pillars instead of the usual two. This feature is patented and exclusive . . . no other tube can use it.

And in Eveready Raytheon only can you get all its advantages . . . clearer, more natural tone; uniformity; long life; and superior strength to resist hazardous jolts and the heavy vibration of dynamic speakers. Modern radios need 4-Pillar rigidity, need the superlative tone of Eveready Raytheons, to do justice to their own improved performance. Your own set needs these tubes!

Prove it for yourself. Open the doors to fuller radio-enjoyment now, and all through the future. Clip the coupon below, fill it out, note your name and address, and mail or present it to any of the dealers listed. Or, just telephone, if you wish. Then . . . there's a revelation in store for you!

The Eveready Hour, radio's oldest commercial feature, is broadcast every Tuesday evening at nine (Eastern standard time) from WEAF over a nation-wide N. B. C. network of 27 stations.

WELFARE TALK AT SPRINGDALE

The Welfare Fund will be discussed before the Springdale Chamber of Commerce and Springdale citizens by R. Templeton Smith, at a meeting tonight at 8 o'clock. The citizens of Springdale have expressed their desire to hear the subject discussed. They are included in the Allegheny County district of the 1930 fund.

The Pittsburgh clubs discussed the welfare fund campaign at their meetings yesterday. Dr. Francis Tyson, of the University of Pittsburgh, addressed the W. & J. Club in the Nixon Restaurant. At the Women's Advertising Club meeting in Kaufmann's dining room, Miss Suzanne Beatty explained that the fund's objective this year was $1,520,248. The Rev. A. G. Curry spoke on the fund before the Council of Churches in the United Presbyterian Book Store.

An increasing number of corporations are reported as organized for the campaign in November. This affords the workers the opportunity to make voluntary contributions, F. J. Chesterman, head of the employe division, announced.

COURT GRANTS ALIMONY CUT

Alimony payments by William F. Nicholas, of 619 Homewood avenue, a bakery proprietor, to his divorced wife, Marian E. Nicholas, of 7141 Hamilton avenue, were reduced from $150 monthly to $75 monthly by an order of Judge Frank P. Patterson in Common Pleas Court.

The reduction was granted, according to the order, because property owned by Nicholas is unoccupied, his sons, employed by him, live with their mother, and Mrs. Nicholas has an income from garage property and also occupies the family residence.

Lynn Fontanne Triumphs As Queen Elizabeth In Fine Tragedy

By GEORGE SEIBEL.

MAXWELL ANDERSON, dramatist, has made two discoveries that make a memorable drama of "Elizabeth the Queen," played at the Nixon last night with all the gorgeous chiaroscuro and symphonic subtleties of a typical Theater Guild production.

George Seibel

The first of these discoveries is that Elizabeth and her court did not talk in blank verse.

And the second is that Elizabeth and all the rest of them were men and women, even as you and I.

Never has the substance of tragedy been made to appear more closely like human life, and rarely has measured prose been made to ring more like the martial syllables of great poetry.

In short, Maxwell Anderson has made a great drama out of the eternal elements—out of love, pride, ambition, envy, passion and hate. His drama would be great merely as history or as poetry, but there is an added quality in our glimpses of modern psychology.

"I love her—I fear her—I hate her—I adore her!" cries Essex to describe his attitude toward the Queen. And her attitude toward him is the same, though not voiced so bluntly.

THE TRUTH OF HISTORY

Anderson has stuck rather closely to the truth of history, merely condensing the time, shifting a few castles about, and letting us hear the plots and quarrels historians have only surmised. He gives a plausible explanation of the treason that has been held against Sir Francis Bacon, who played Judas to Essex, and he uses the episode of the ring which might have bought the Queen's mercy to build up a fine climax of pride and loss in the closing scene.

The only thing that appears incongruous is the introduction of three actors from Shakespeare's company in that last scene, to present a snatch of a Falstaff scene from "Henry IV" for the Queen's distraction. They do not divert the Queen, and they do not divert the audience. The court fool would be more in place here as a foil.

Aside from this the drama moves with the inevitable impulse of great tragedy. It is great tragedy, the eternal tragedy of man and woman mirrored in the fateful love of a great queen and a proud nobleman.

THIS IS ELIZABETH

But if Maxwell Anderson has done something heroic and soul-stirring, no less heroic is the achievement of Lynn Fontanne, who plays the Elizabeth of history. This is not Shakespeare's "imperial votaress who passed on in maiden meditation fancy-free." This is the royal Jezebel who cursed and spat, who when her lover damns her answers back: "Damn you and double damn you."

Lynn Fontanne's make-up alone is a piece of heroism as well as a work of art. For an actress who has the charm and sweetness of Lynn Fontanne to sacrifice her beauty upon the altar of history requires self-abnegation that makes a religion of art.

But every gesture, every look, every cadence of her voice is in tune with that mask. Here is a great tragic figure, portrayed as a truly human figure. She does more to make our age understand Elizabeth than Lytton Strachey has done.

AND THIS IS ESSEX

The figure of Essex is more in the conventional key of romantic fiction. Ambition that persists in the face of destruction is hard to make credible. But Alfred Lunt invests the character of Essex with enough of the passionate lover, sex-enslaved by the woman older than himself, to explain his death as a desire for liberation.

Lunt's Essex is also a masterly piece of make-up, copying closely the historic though unauthentic portraits we have. Regarded as acting it is a clear-cut portrayal of a male egotist, with a mixture of heroic stupidity that makes his downfall certain.

The vocal, facial, and psychological phases of both players in both these parts were so finely fused that the art of acting could hardly rise to greater heights.

They were surrounded by other players who acquitted themselves in a manner worthy of such company. Morris Carnovsky as Lord Bacon was the counterfeit of "the brightest, wisest, meanest of mankind," both in look and action. Percy Waram as Sir Walter Raleigh, Arthur Hughes as Cecil, Robert Conness as Burleigh, Fred Monti as the Fool, and Anita Kerr as Penelope gave portrayals that fitted admirably into the dramatic structure.

Here is a drama that is literature, presented by actors who can act, and produced in a fashion that creates the illusion of a great age without losing the eternal pulse of humanity. "Elizabeth the Queen" is worthy to wear the purple of her royal lineage.

'NOVELTIES 1930' ACADEMY FEATURE

"Novelties of 1930," current attraction in the Academy, is a new show on the Mutual Circuit. Harry Clexx and Harry Meyers, comedians, and Jean Bodine, singing and dancing comedienne, are featured. Two special scenes are "Dance of the Rose" and "Garden of Girls." The Kenyon Sisters, who can sing and dance, Helen Carlson and Mildred and Anita, acrobatic dancers, appear in specialties. Other principals are Artie Lloyd, George Reynolds, Andy White and Peggie O'Neil.

Dramatic

Katharine Cornell, favorite dramatic actress, last season here in "The Age of Innocence," will be on the Alvin stage next week in her new play, "Dishonored Lady."

PITT HERO FINDS OLD MELODRAMA FOLKS IN SMALLTOWN

By CLARENCE F. GRUNDISH

"Sure Fire," a comedy about Broadway playwrights and small-town folks, is the new George Sharp attraction in the Pitt. It isn't so much of a play. But it is pleasant entertainment.

Paul McGrath, as a sophisticated playwright, goes to the little town of Claysville and learns that things happen just as they did in the old melodramas. He meets a nice old lady, a pretty daughter, a younger brother who is a black-sheep, and a villain who is a whole herd of blacksheep. This villain has his eyes, and almost his hands, on the old homestead.

Alice Ann Baker is Nice Old Lady; Jean May is Pretty Daughter; Chuck Webster is Blacksheep Brother, and John Lawrence is Villain. But there are more characters. Robert Fiske is a rube constable; John Winthrop, a big-time show producer; Hugh Banks, a second playwright; Mabel Kroman, a dancer from the big city, and John Arnott, the villain's nephew, who is nothing more than a snake in the grass, or rather, postoffice, for it is in this setting that most of the action occurs.

Two others, in minor roles, deserve mention. One is Stephanie Diamond who has the ability of appearing attractive in bright yellow, and James Karns, who does a young rube who "moons" over a city girl.

"Street Singer," Alvin Attraction, Strong In Fun, Steps

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Queenie Smith, one of our sprightliest little comediennes, came to the Alvin last night in her musical comedy success of the last New York season, "The Street Singer," bringing with her a stageful of exceptional talent in the fun-making and stepping line.

"The Street Singer" is a combination of the Cinderella and Pygmalion legends, whereby a poor little waif is suddenly wafted from poverty to all the ease and comfort riches can provide. This time the little poor girl is not a dressmaker's or milliner's apprentice whose beauty captures the eye of the son of the wealthy dame to whom she delivers a dress.

ROMANTIC EXPERIMENT

She is not even a street singer. She's a flower seller in Paris—cute but no culture—and she's chosen for an experiment. A rich young man's fiancee objects to being made over but agrees providing he can remodel another woman. So Queenie, the flower girl, is chosen, and he is to make a lady of her in three months. He succeeds, too, but that isn't all of the story. We'll leave some of it for the play to reveal.

It is rather a long story and sometimes it gets in the way of the kind of action one expects from musical comedy. But when action finally gets its chance it goes into its part enthusiastically.

STAR IS WINSOME

Miss Smith's role is an appealing one and her attractiveness, singing and dancing, though not all of the show, are a big part of it. She is winsome even when she swears, and she does that even to a whopping big swear word. But she's not the whole of the show—not by a cupla-comedians-and-a brace-of-dancers-sight! The comedians are George Hassell, who could be a little more refined, and not hurt his comedy a bit, and Frank Lalor. They have a duet that is most funny. The dancers are Harry Morton and Nick Long, Jr., who do not have to fear comparison with any of our best steppers, especially Mr. Long.

The chorus, too, is full of the ardor of movement. It has elan, which is a highbrow word for dash and spirit. The song features of "The Street Singer" you have heard—"So Beats My Heart for You" and "I Think You're Wonderful," but you ought to see that chorus dance the latter. Speed, novelty and endurance, that's what it is—speed, novelty and endurance.

Musical

Howard Marsh, one of the leading actors of the lyric stage, will sing the principal role in "The Well of Romance," new operetta coming Monday next to the Nixon.

Pittsburghers Get Call to Army Duty

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Six Pennsylvanians holding commissions in the Officers Reserve Corps were ordered to active duty, effective November 9. They will report to the assistant secretary of war for training in procurement activities. They include Lieut. Col. Andrew B. Berger, and Lieut. Col. Willard F. Rockwell, both of Pittsburgh, and Maj. Earl S. Areford, Uniontown.

Testimonial Dinner To Honor Burgess

Friends of Burgess E. B. W. Pfischner, of Millvale, are making arrangements for a testimonial dinner to be given in his honor October 28 in the Wildwood Country Club. The burgess is the father of the late Senator Edward E. Pfischner. He is serving his fourth term as burgess of Millvale. W. E. Murphy has been selected chairman of the committee in charge of the testimonial.

'UNCLE TOM'S CABIN' IS SHOWBOAT DRAMA

By LEE CURRAN

Captain Menke laughs right in the face of the Weather Man and continues his Golden Rod Showboat at Montrose-on-the-Allegheny, just above Aspinwall. But now the boat's heated, this week's attraction is none other than that Harriet Beecher Stowe classic, "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

It was cold enough to have Eliza flee across the ice in the Allegheny River last night, but Capt. Menke confined the action to the stage. Needless to say, Eliza escaped the bloodhounds anyway.

The big scene involving Little Eva was held. Only she didn't make the trip to heaven. The hole in the roof of the showboat wasn't large enough to accomodate her, one of the other players explained. But she died just the same.

Of course, Simon Legree was there. He cursed and beat poor Uncle Tom. But Old Tom, in the person of Frank Anton, didn't seem to mind. He just said: "You can buy me, marsa, but you never can buy my soul."

Yes, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" opened on Capt. Menke's boat last night. And was it played? It was played as it never was played before!

ASTHMA CAUSE DISCOVERED

Free Booklet Mailed on Request

Indianapolis—Those who suffer from bronchial asthma and hay fever will be gratified to learn that at last science has succeeded in discovering the basic cause of these two stubborn maladies.

This discovery disproves the old theory that asthma is due solely to climatic conditions and hay fever entirely to pollen. The discovery of the real cause of these diseases has proved that these are merely aggravating factors and that the basic cause lies in the individual himself.

Fortunately for all who suffer from these diseases a way has also been found to overcome this basic cause in the individual instead of merely treating the surface symptoms, as has been done in the past.

For full information write for important booklet on the discovery of the cause of bronchial asthma and hay fever. It will be sent free to readers of this newspaper who will write to Department 6736, Fugate Company, 126 S. Meridian St., Indianapolis, Ind.

Bargains for Banquets

Where popular demand reduces prices

"One policy of your company which gives me the greatest satisfaction," writes an A&P customer, "is that you do not take advantage of a special demand for a product to profiteer.

"For example, on the third of last July my A&P store sold good quality watermelons from 25c to 55c below other stores in town. A&P, realizing that many people enjoy a nice melon for Fourth of July picnics, put them within reach of everyone."

A&P believes in making it as easy as possible for people to get what they want when they want it most. That is why A&P provides special bargains in fruits and vegetables at the height of their season, in turkeys at Thanksgiving and Christmas, in delicacies during the Holidays, and in eggs at Easter.

The usual custom is to charge a little more when people for one reason or another are pretty sure to buy anyhow. A&P thinks these are just the times to make the cost of high living as low as possible.

CUT IN CLINIC FEES URGED

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Julius Rosenwald, Chicago philanthropist, urged the establishment of more moderate pay clinics and hospitals to provide efficient service at fees within reach of the average man. He addressed members of the American Hospital Association, now in convention.

Pointing out that with more than $3,000,000,000 invested in American hospitals, the institutions have entered the class of big business. Rosenwald told of the success of hospitals running with a schedule of charges and professional fees within reach of persons of limited salary.

As an example, he cited the moderate priced pay clinics of the University of Chicago in connection with its teaching hospital. During the year 1929-30 the hospital ran 82 per cent full and the pay clinics increased from a trifle more than 100 patients a day during its opening year, three years ago, to almost 300 a day at present.

Therefore, he said, hospitals and clinics at the present time should decrease their free and greatly enlarge their pay work, thus adding substantially to their current incomes and offering services "more in keeping with American ideals and much more acceptable to the majority of American citizens."

Secretaries Are Leading Double Lives in the Very Best Families

With a nonchalance that even a murad would envy, secretaries in our nicest living rooms are today concealing everything from the family linens to ex-judge—and feeling quite virtuous about it! Bookish above, their lower depths hide everything from bridge scores to backgammon. Or, if it's a tiny apartment where the beds disappear and things aren't everything they seem, your secretary will probably have the wedding Wedgwood dinner service stored away in its upper reaches, while down below is the no-man's land of sewing things and such. And with it all, with all the practicality, there's that superb dignity and decorativeness—and the tremendous relief of a tall, towering column against a roomful of low sofas and low chairs. And so, because secretaries are useful and fashionable and all but indispensable, Kaufmann's has whole regiments of them, priced (the year-'round way) from 39.50 to 154.75. By the way, secretaries make superb Christmas gifts! Eighth Floor.

Leo Miller, of the Bellesby construction department has discovered how the mountaineers of West Virginia solve the unemployment problem. Mr. Miller was directing a gang of ditch diggers on a pipe line in West Virginia.

As the workmen reached a county line and continued digging into the next county, Mr. Miller noticed a horde of men advancing on them from the hills.

The diggers immediately dropped their tools and went back to their own county. The newcomers approached Mr. Miller, told him they were his new diggers and promptly went to work. Wise Mr. Miller agreed.

Admirers of that sweet concoction known as lady-fingers have labelled John O'Connor, Jr., of Carnegie Institute, their enemy. At the preview of the International Art Exhibition last week, there were those who looked forward to a midnight supper of lady-fingers, this being a custom which prevails at previews in the East. But there were no lady-fingers, and we know three persons who went home hungry. A rugged Irishman, Mr. O'Connor was expected to relent for the evening only and personally serve each guest a dainty dish. He failed dismally.

Aside from that, the preview came up to expectations. A few hundred guests were invited and a few thousand turned out. Most everybody was dressed, and disappointed was the woman who was not pointed out at least once as the model for this or that canvas.

However, the preview crowd is not typical of the crowds which fill the building to see the pictures. It is the Sunday crowd which is made up of us average human beings. It is Sunday afternoon that you hear such dialogue as this:

"Howd'ja like the pictures?"

"Howd'ju like 'em?"

"I asked you first."

Or:

"If I owned that picture I'd have it painted on the back of my bridge decks."

Critics generally like this 1930 exhibition but we do not. The paintings weren't big enough to suit us.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Oct. 21.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Every man has his own way of telling how bad business is. The head waiter of the big Del Monte Hotel was telling me of a big banquet held there the night before by a well known organization, and he lamented, "It wasn't nothing like the years before. Why, we cleaned up after 'em in less than an hour this morning." That means times are so hard they are carrying their empty bottles home with 'em. But there was a real barometer of business. Some king is being crowned in Africa, and every other king sent sympathy, and even presidents wired him that "being the head man nowadays is overrated."

Will Rogers.

LUNCH FUNDS SPENT FOR 'NUMBERS'

Fifth Avenue, Minersville and Franklin Schools Picketed; Gambling Suspect Held

In a newly-inaugurated war against "numbers" writers who barter their wares for the lunch money of school children, plainclothesmen will be stationed in the vicinity of three public schools, Inspector Albert Beebe announced today.

The announcement came after the arrest of Calhoun Brunson, 27, Negro, of 2223 Forbes street, who was arrested, police say, as he was selling "numbers" to pupils of the Minersville School, Center avenue, near Morgan street.

MANY COMPLAINTS

Inspector Beebe said the arrest of Brunson was the result of numerous complaints of school principals, teachers and parents of school children.

Beebe said that beginning today his plainclothesmen would be stationed near the Minersville and Franklin public schools and Fifth Avenue High School.

Discussing his drive against the small-time bookies, Inspector Beebe said:

"Selling 'numbers' to school children must stop immediately. It is bad enough for adults to gamble in the clearing house racket, but the fact that the pennies of our school children are finding their way into the coffers of the racketeers makes the situation intolerable.

WELCOMES COMPLAINTS

"I'll gladly welcome any complaint made by anyone concerning 'numbers' writers, and I will take immediate steps to break up this condition."

Brunson was held in $2,500 bail. Inspector Beebe said several "numbers" books were found on the prisoner. He will be given a hearing tomorrow morning in Center Avenue Police Court.

SPEAKER LAUDS YOUNG PEOPLE

Young people are better today than ever before, because they are prepared to meet the stress of life, in the opinion of the Rev. R. W. Gibson, pastor of the Mt. LeLanon United Presbyterian Church. He expressed that opinion yesterday before the United Presbyterian Ministerial Association.

The minister contended that if the young people of 50 years ago were transplanted to the present, they would not stand up under the present temptations as well as this generation does. He said there is too great a tendency to consider customs as moral laws. Mr. Gibson is one of the directors of the Young Peoples Christian Union of the United Presbyterian Church.

Wife of 'Affluent' Beauty Operator Wins Alimony

Emery Hajas, beauty parlor operator with residence in the Seventh Avenue Hotel, was ordered to pay $30 weekly alimony to his wife, Mrs. Margaret Hajas, of 48 Superior street, Duquesne, by Judge Elder W. Marshall in Common Pleas Court.

Her petition, filed in connection with her suit for divorce on the grounds of cruelty and indignities, averred Hajas derives an income ranging from $12,000 to $15,000 annually from the beauty shop. The petition averred:

"He lives in comfort and affluence, whereas his family is living in the greatest misery and abject destitution bordering on the state of starvation."

They were married August 25, 1912, and parted March 25, 1927. Household expenses paid by Hajas before their separation ran about $8,000 annually, according to the testimony.

Proceeds are given to the makers, in turn forwarded to dependants of convicts, it was pointed out. Many pieces are being purchased by the public for Christmas gifts.

Other exhibits include one on world peace, examples of workmanship of Pittsburgh blind, and work done in schools for the deaf. The convention, which opened Sunday, will close tonight with a visit to the Carnegie International exhibit.

Gangsters' Raid on Police Station Successful

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

"The Edgewater Kid," Polack Annie's man, is murdered. Goldie Gorio's North Side gang, of which the Kid was a member, accuses Kinky King, leader of the West Side gang. Kinky swore to get The Kid for taking Annie from him. Later, Kinky is found murdered, a gold revolver, similar to that possessed by Goldie, beside him. To satisfy the public's demand for action, the police chief arrests Annie. He refuses Goldie's request for her release. In revenge, Goldie's gang throws the theater district into darkness and destroys public property. A committee of prominent citizens calls on the mayor, demanding protection. In jail, Annie is grief-stricken over the Kid. Goldie plans to raid the police station and rescue her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XI.

The police matron had just locked the outer barred door behind Crip, an insignificant looking little Negro with a club foot. At night he ran sandwiches and coffee for the prisoners. And night and day he was a stool for the police. The narcotic squad palmed him a ration of confiscated dope at intervals, and the chief of detectives was covering him up for the murder of a black back-room girl that had never been "solved."

Crip had a whining voice, a shrewd eye and an uncanny sense of hearing. Tucked away in his thick-skulled bean was more information than equipped a police chief's secretary. He dressed in a ragged suit, and wore a greasy old cap down over his eyes. People took pity on him and oft-times gave him coins without solicitation.

"Take that black coffee to Polack Annie," ordered the matron. She turned back to her desk when a terrific blow on the steel door burst it open. The next instant, standing before her was Goldie Gorio—a brilliant, gold mounted automatic in each hand. Goldie was smiling pleasantly.

"Good evening, Anna," he greeted.

"Good evenin', Goldie," faltered Anna Daley.

Annie Free

Gorio Succeeds in Getting Her Out

"Get Polack Annie out here and get her quick," spat Goldie through his gold teeth. Then he smiled again.

Polack Annie, whose cell door was open and who had just received the coffee from the mangy Negro, ran out when she heard Goldie's voice.

"Goldie!" she cried.

"Get out of here and into my car in the alley," Goldie ordered with words as staccato as machine-gun fire—and he never took his eyes from the police matron.

Polack Annie ran to the door, where Cranky caught her by the arm. Goldie backed out, the two guns still levelled at the woman. At the door he thrust the automatics into their holsters, and, reaching into his pocket, drew out a twenty-dollar gold piece which he tossed at the toes of the terrified police matron.

Confusion

Alarm Is Sent to Fire Department

"Thanks," he said, and was gone. The police matron first grabbed the coin, then turned and grabbed the telephone. She clicked the hook frantically. There was no life—no response from the switchboard.

"Let the siren loose, Ray," Goldie ordered.

Like the screech of a hundred devil-tortured souls the contraband scream tore the night. The car slid around the corner into the street and north. Zing—blop—came a shot at the south intersection.

"Damn!" muttered Goldie.

As he passed the front of the police building the door belched forth his eight men. Goldie grinned. He turned and looked back and saw confusion down the street. He saw Crip, too, the little Negro stool, pulling the fire alarm box just in front of the police station. One of Goldie's men, running from the station, sent the Negro sprawling, but Goldie had gone but a few blocks before he heard the sirens of the fire department.

"How in hell did I happen to overlook that," he muttered. Then he heard, too, the siren of the Chief's car—a siren he knew of old. The Chief had been in his office, two blocks distant, trying to bestir his mind to some plan by which he could salvage his own skin. He heard the shot on the corner and run down to his car.

Three of Goldie's autos were within sight now—two ahead and one behind.

"Step on her, Ray," ordered Goldie, who had slid back the glass partition between him and the chauffeur. The car lunged forward and shot ahead of the other two.

A Target

Bullet Strikes Back of Automobile

"Up to the boulevard, then a block west, then north and double back," commanded Goldie.

Ray nodded. Goldie darted a glance behind.

"Not too fast now, boy," he warned. "Let these other cars catch up." The machine slowed down. They were clipping along at 45.

Directly in front at the intersection of Broad street the traffic light blocked them. A policeman stood in their path, his hand upraised. Ray never swerved his car, but kept the center of the street and the cop jumped to save himself. There was a thud on the rear pane of the sedan. The glass was shatter-proof and bullet-proof. Goldie felt the need of a smoke and took a cigaret from his case.

The Get-Away

Gangsters Succeed in Eluding Police

They reached the boulevard, dodging cars, passing red lights and policemen. There were four of Goldie's cars behind him now and they formed a fast-moving procession. Behind, Goldie could hear the relentless siren of the Chief's roadster.

BANK WRECKER STARTS TERM

Stephen Sembrot, 112 Helen street, McKees Rocks, former cashier of the closed Peoples State Bank, of McKees Rocks, today began serving a term of three to six years in the Allegheny County workhouse, imposed by Judge Harry H. Rowand in Criminal Court.

Sembrot pleaded guilty May 19 to two charges of forgery and one of falsifying a statement to the state bank examiner, but sentence was deferred. About 75 charges, involving alleged forgeries of more than $50,000, had originally been brought, and it was said it would have taken two months to try all the charges. Sembrot simplified the action by pleading to the three charges.

Attorney A. E. Eckles, pleading for Sembrot, declared he had used money of the bank for stock speculations will full knowledge of at least one officer of the bank, but when the market fell he was permitted to take the full blame.

The bank was closed and its affairs taken over by the McKees Rocks Trust Company, which paid the depositors in full. Only the stockholders lost.

WOMAN BANDIT ELUDES POLICE

No trace had been found by police today of a blonde woman and two men who obtained $300 in a holdup of the pharmacy of Samuel Reich, 1200 Allegheny avenue, yesterday.

The woman, about 40, walked into the store, bought a tooth brush and left when her two accomplices entered. The two men pointed revolvers at Reich and then knocked him to the floor. He was dragged to the rear room and bound with adhesive tape by the thugs, who took $250 from a safe and $50 from the cash register. Leaving, the bandits were joined by the woman, who acted as a lookout.

ASK COUNCIL FORBID USE OF SITE

Trade Board Urges District Rally to Fight Nuisance; Mail Service Criticized

A resolution calling upon City Council to enforce its ban against a garbage dump on Forward avenue, near Beechwood boulevard, was adopted at a meeting of the Squirrel Hill Board of Trade in the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church last night.

The site of the proposed dump is owned by John E. Born.

It was charged that although Council last week promised a committee of 100 from the Squirrel Hill district there would be no more dumping on the lot, several trucks loaded with garbage from distant points had been dumped there since.

QUOTE PRICES

The ground consists of seven and one-half acres and the price asked of the city is $10,000.

Among speakers denouncing the plans were J. M. Lambing, J. J. Lawlor, George Dowler, president of the board, and Harry Connell.

The board urged all residents to aid in the fight against the proposed dump. It is possible that the aid of trustees of Frick Park and the board of directors of the Pittsburgh Country Club will be sought in the fight to prevent establishment of the dump. All other means failing, the State Board of Health may be asked to intercede.

ASKS POSTAL REFORM

The board, after hearing Alderman Sol S. Goldstein declare that a letter mailed in Squirrel Hill could be delivered as soon in New York as to a Squirrel Hill address, decided to ask postoffice officials to remedy conditions.

HEAR RIVER-RAIL PLAN MONDAY

Council will hold a hearing and conference on the proposed rail and river terminals Monday afternoon, the meeting being postponed yesterday when it was learned that Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang had been called out of the city to attend the funeral of a friend in York, Pa.

A report received 10 days ago from Lang recommended the purchase of two rail and river terminal sites, one west of the Manchester Bridge on the Ohio River and the other at Hays Station on the Monongahela River.

The terminals, according to city officials, would extend to small shippers the advantages of cheap river transportation now enjoyed to the full only by large corporations like the Carnegie Steel Company and the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, which have their own terminals.

Contest in Traffic Essays Ends Friday

The fourth annual traffic essay contest of the Better Traffic Committee will close Friday, according to Walter Rosenbaum, chairman of the education sub-committee. The principals of public and parochial schools on that day will mail in the essays of their respective schools. Approximately 2,500 finalists from 191 different schools will try for the 250 cash awards.

Nurse Sues City Over Fall in Street

Mary Helmick, a nurse, of East Liberty, asked $20,000 damages from the City of Pittsburgh in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court, alleging she suffered serious and permament injury when she fell in front of 5714 Mignonette street, due to defective paving.

Assurance Given Postal Building Being Pushed

While no date can be set for the start of construction on the new Pittsburgh postoffice, plans are being expedited, according to Assistant Secretary of the Treasury F. K. Heath.

His letter, received by Council, responded to a resolution urging an immediate start of the work to relieve unemployment.

Unusual difficulties have been encountered by private architects in adapting the proposed building to the needs of various Federal agencies, Heath wrote.

MT. LEBANON PAY HELD UP

A tie vote by Mt. Lebanon Township Commissioners held up payment of bills of three auditors, who in making their audit return, asserted they found that Justice of the Peace Ira Edmundson had failed to turn over $506 in fines due the township. Edmundson has since filed suit to test the auditor's right to check his books.

Two commissioners voted in favor and two against payment of the bills, one member not voting. Chairman C. W. Scheck and Charles Clatty, who opposed, declared the money should not be paid pending disposition of the suit.

The auditors asserted further investigation had disclosed Edmundson owed the township more money than was found in the first audit and expressed their willingness to await the decision of the court.

RETURN KILLING SUSPECT TO WASHINGTON

Man Arrested on Bus Here Turned Over to Capital Sleuths to Face Charges

W. C. Mahoney, 29, of Washington, D. C., arrested Sunday as a suspect in the killing of Louis Bush, president of the Gray Line Motor Tours, Inc., of Washington, was en route to the capital city today.

Two Washington detectives who arrived here early today furnished city detectives with a detailed description of William J. Carnell, another suspect in the crime, who was believed to have been with Mahoney when he was arrested on a transcontinental bus on its stop here. Both were bound for Los Angeles, according to Washington detectives, who requested their arrest.

Carnell's mother, Mrs. Sarah Margaret Sullivan, 60, was said to have named her son as the slayer of Bush, who was shot during an attempted holdup in the rear of his home October 6, according to Washington authorities.

Police reported Mrs. Sullivan as saying her son came home the night of the slaying with blood on his clothes and threatened to kill her if she told authorities he had committed the crime.

Mahoney has denied any part in the crime. He told police his bus companion was a Bill Murray, they said.

The Camera Question Box

Today's question: A woman with home dependencies is more efficient than an independent woman. Does this seem true to you?

Mr. Braun

CHARLES BRAUN, Carrick, student, Pitt: Yes, this seems true to me. I think that a woman who has home dependencies has a better idea of responsibility than one who is totally independent.

Mr. Meyers

EDGAR MEYERS, Carrick, student, Pitt: I believe this is true because such a woman has a better knowledge of human nature and is bound to be more capable. She is, undoubtedly, a more advanced woman.

Mr. Muhlheizler

JOHN MUHLHEIZLER, North Side, student, Pitt: A woman who has others dependent on her for support would give better service than one whose position means nothing to anyone but herself. The above statement seems true to me

Miss Suehr

MISS ETHEL SUEHR, Crafton, student, Pitt: No, I do not think that this is true. It seems to me that the woman who is independent would be more efficient, because she would have no home difficulties to bother her and could devote her major attention to her business.

Miss Moore

MISS DOROTHY MOORE, Crafton, student, Pitt: This seems very true to me, because a woman with someone else dependent on her would have a greater stimulus to keep going. She would also have a superior understanding of human nature and know how to cope with situations as they arise.

Miss Oliver

MISS SARAH OLIVER, Crafton, student, Pitt: I believe that a woman who has home dependencies would work harder to get ahead, realizing the responsibility of holding her position. It seems to me that this woman would be more efficient than one who is independent of others.

LAURA INGALLS

1 KILLED, 3 HURT TRAFFIC TOLL

The identity of a man, about 30, killed by an automobile last night in Brighton road, near Kirkbride street, was being sought by morgue attaches today. Three others were slightly hurt in two other mishaps.

The victim was crossing Brighton road when a machine driven, police say, by Frank W. Murphy, 40, of 3638 Campus street, struck him. Murphy took the man to Presbyterian Hospital, where he was pronounced dead. Murphy later was turned over to the coroner by police.

John Brown, 26, of Twenty-eighth street, McKeesport, was in McKeesport Hospital today from a possible skull fracture suffered yesterday when struck by an automobile at Walnut and Twenty-fourth streets, McKeesport.

Two men were slightly injured early today when an automobile and a taxicab crashed at Reedsdale street and Galveston avenue, North Side. The injured were George L. White, of Coraopolis, driver of the cab, and William Connors, 23, a passenger in the automobile. After treatment at Allegheny General Hospital they went to their homes. Harry Brewer, 29, of 1310 Arch street, alleged driver of the automobile, was arrested by Woods Run police on a charge of reckless driving.

gettin' into," muttered Goldie. Then as they turned into the wide boulevard Goldie instructed:

"Cut this next corner on two and keep straight."

The chauffeur speeded up until the next corner. He fairly skidded around it, and as they turned the other four cars whizzed by. They had gone several blocks when Goldie saw the green lights of the police car turn into the street. He said nothing, but felt with both hands beneath his coat.

Ray was knocking off fifty now. The police car kept faster and gradually began to gain on them, and still Goldie gave no instructions to his chauffeur. After about fifteen blocks the car was almost alongside. Goldie had turned down the window in the door.

"Hit it!" called Goldie.

With a lunge the limousine leaped forward like a frightened animal. Goldie, with something in his hand, leaned toward the window.

He drew back his arm and let fly. In a second his car was a full block ahead of the other and in a few moments the Chief's car had been left far behind. Then the chauffeur began a series of turns and finally they were in the country, speeding along at 70.

The window of the car still was open and the fresh night air breezed in. Goldie inhaled deeply.

"The air's great, ain't it, Babes?" he asked.

One of the Machines Is Wrecked

"Any air's great outside that hole," commented Polack Annie.

Goldie switched on a little light in front of him and pushed back a panel. He began to dial the radio. Here was music from the Dresden Hotel. Now he had a night club. Then he got what he wanted.

"Municipal broadcasting station, RYNC," came through the speaker, concealed in the top of the car. "The police have just captured one of the gangsters who tonight staged the daring raid on Central Detail. He refused to give his name. The homicide squad is in pursuit of four cars. One was wrecked and abandoned three blocks from the station. The gangsters escaped. Two of them are believed to have been badly wounded. All hospitals have been warned to watch for them. The chief of police has personally take charge of the round-up of these desperadoes who have dared to storm the Central Station itself, as a climax to an unprecedented . . ."

"Put on some music, Goldie," purred Polack Annie.

"Okay, Babes."

He turned on a jazz band. As the strident strains of the split-beat syncope came through, Polack Annie, a clutch in her voice, sank back and let go a sigh that was almost a sob:

"Gee, the Kid was a hot dancer."

Goldie leaned forward, opened his mouth, then said nothing for a moment. Half a minute later, to himself, he pondered:

"Who could it be them damn dumb cops nabbed?"

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Society Folk Attend Shows

All the first-nighters and ever so many other society folks, gowned in the infinitely varied, colorful mode of the season were at the Nixon and the Alvin last night. The Theater Guild brought "Elizabeth, the Queen," to the Nixon, and "The Street Singer," with Queenie Smith, entertained the Alvin audience.

Back from Hot Springs, Va., Mrs. Raymond Ford Moreland was at the Nixon wearing a notably interesting gown of very dark brown lace. She wore an interesting jacket of white velvet with a scarf collar of the same material and a band of fox fur at the bottom of the jacket and at the cuffs.

Mrs. Arthur P. Woolfolk was in a sapphire blue lace gown, and I caught a glimpse of Mrs. Simon T. Patterson, wearing black velvet and satin, in the foyer during intermission.

Mrs. Charles Flaccus wore an interesting gown of black crepe with eggshell lace, and I saw Mrs. Wilmer M. Jacoby wearing a most becoming gown of coppergio chiffon, fashioned with a particularly full skirt. She wore a black velvet wrap, collared in white fox.

Theater Patrons

Others I caught a glimpse of in the crowded foyer were Frances Fitzgerald, Mrs. Arthur Little, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Jones, III.

Mrs. Herbert A. May wore violet chiffon, and Helen Leovy wore a distinctive frock of orchid chiffon with a band of rhinestones as a belt and rhinestones outlining the decolletage. Her sister, Mrs. Roberdeau Green Annan, chose deep eggshell lace.

A dinner gown of black crepe having a Russian tunic, edged in ermine, was worn by Mrs. Charles S. Wunder, whom I saw chatting with Virginia Furey, wearing a green velvet and white fox wrap, and her mother, Mrs. William H. Furey, in a black ensemble.

New Fall Colors

Mrs. James W. Brown chose beige lace, and Mrs. Josephine O'Neil, black lace, and Mrs. Dorwin Donnelly black velvet.

Arriving with her mother, Mrs. F. W. Edmondson, who wore piecrust lace, was Martha Edmondson, a debutante of the past winter, who chose a flowered crepe frock.

Jane Allderdice chose sapphire blue crepe, and Mrs. Harvey Childs III wore a black velvet wrap with a cape collar of ermine, and Mrs. Theodore F. Smith was in black velvet.

As I was leaving the theater I saw Mrs. Frederic Ickes Merrick, wearing gold lace and a mole-skin coat.

Mrs. Sydney Hammond was there, and Mrs. Gordon King, wearing black satin, moulded to the figure to the hipline, and flared below.

Mrs. John A. Byerly wore green crepe with a black velvet and ermine wrap; Mrs. George S. Baton, a black ensemble, and Mrs. Rose Natalie Yost, gold lace. The junior Harry Christian Mays were there, and Mrs. May wearing a green crepe gown.

Late fall days will bring not only debut parties for the buds, but many other social demands, including their aid at benefits.

Tea for Buds

Again this year the debutantes will appear in the program of entertainment given at the Cinderella ball, to be held this year on November 28 for the benefit of St. Margaret's Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. John J. Bissell is entertaining the buds of the year at a tea in her home this afternoon to talk over plans for the benefit. Marjorie Kimball again this year will be entertainment chairman.

The Cot Club of Sewickley Valley was successful in bringing its twenty-fourth dramatic production to Guild Hall last evening, which will be repeated again tonight. The program consists of three one-act plays, under the general direction of Mrs. James Todd, president of the organization.

State Jewish Council Delegates Guests at Colorful Banquet

A day given over to reports and election of officers will close the tenth annual meeting of the Conference of Pennsylvania Sections, National Council of Jewish Women, today. Tonight the several hundred delegates will visit the International Art Exhibit and many will remain over for the tea and exhibit of the Handcraft Guild and the Industrial League tomorrow.

The colorful banquet last night in the Hotel Schenley was the high light of yesterday's proceedings. Mrs. Gilbert G. Jacobosky, of Wilkes-Barre, was toastmistress and the invocation was made by Mrs. Saul Lavine. The memories, realities and visions of the council was sketched by three speakers, Mrs. Max Margolis, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Alfred Rosenstein, state president, and Miss Flora Rothenberg, retiring president of the state juniors. Miss Dolly Steele, of Philadelphia, new junior president, was introduced.

The music consisted of numbers by the talented Pittsburgh Council Trio, Caroline Himelblau, Edith Canter Lazear and Bertha Scharff Sadler, with Mrs. A. L. Balter at the piano. As the concluding program event Mrs. Jacobosky introduced Mary Agnes Doyle, of the Goodman Memorial Theater, Chicago. Under the caption, "Broadway and Ballads," Miss Doyle gave a number of delightfully interpreted readings, including scenes from recent Broadway successes, among them "Juno and the Paycock" and "The Torch Bearers."

Both morning and afternoon sessions were devoted to routine business, chiefly reports. Of especial interest was Mrs. Rosenstein's report in which she told of the reorganization of the social service department. As a state unit, this department was formerly limited to visiting institutions, but is now to include all fields of community work. Another important step was the decision to make each section individually responsible for the distribution of two-year calendars to elementary and high schools and colleges. On these calendars will be marked all the Jewish holy days and co-operation will be asked of the school authorities that no tests or special events shall be arranged for these days. Mrs. Jacobosky's report as chairman of legislation was presented in a unique way. Four juniors, Sara Helen Davis, Flora Koch, Mrs. Bernard Friedman and Cora Strauss, enacted it in the form of a meeting.

Reports Heard

The exhibits from the Western Penitentiary, the School for the Deaf, and other institutions, which has been arranged in the reception room adjoining the ball room, has attracted general attention, particularly as an indication of the sort of social service work done by the Pittsburgh Section.

Pajamas for The Moderns

Do You Think:

That the pajama has a large part in the present day woman's wardrobe? You would say "yes" were you to view a 1930 fashion show. You would see half the models in skirts that are bifurcated.

At Hotel Schenley tomorrow afternoon at the Tea and Exhibit of the Industrial League and Handcraft Guild, alluring pajamas made of velvet and satin and silks in gay colors will be modeled.

Of course, negligees are still worn. There is one of pale chiffon discreetly veiling the trousers and it is really fascinating.

The older women often cling to the conventional black and there is a lovely one in chiffon velvet.

You know that everything in these shops is made by the needy, who receive all the proceeds.

OLD BONNET PROVIDES AN INSPIRATION FOR NEW HATS

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—Fashion must be going to our heads, for our hats are getting smarter by the minute. The days when any old felt hat could be worn with any frock or to almost any occasion seem to have vanished with our return to sartorial femininity. Now we have hats of original design, intricately worked and detailed, hats that by virtue of their perfection become an important part of the costume, not merely a head covering. The modistes are sending us back to childhood days by the adoption of the bonet-inspired hat which was such an important mode in the picturesque Directoire period, a period that holds much sartorial inspiration for ultra-modern designers. Velvet continues to be of great importance and for every day use the felt hat fills a long felt want for an informal chapeau. But even the simplest felt hat is treated with respect and clever detailing, thus making hats the head-lights of the car that travels the road of fashion.

WOMEN are again using the hat to express their type and consequently at fashionable resorts one is enabled to observe a wealth of original millinery ideas. The shirred hat shown here was worn by a very chic young Parisienne while lunching at the popular Ritz and expresses in every smart line the present millinery trend. It is of white velvet intricately shirred and fitting closely to the head. Although it is worn well off the face, the bare forehead effect is softened with the aid of a tiny black veil which is laced through the shirrings in front. Two large ball pins in black and silver are placed at the left of the front.

THE OTHER HAT is the latest contribution of Reboux to the mode. It is obviously inspired by the Directoire bonnet. The crown and brim are of black felt. The latter turns up and off the face sharply at the front and sides and rolls back in the best period style. A shaded jade green feather is whipped down over the rolled back brim. Several tucks at the top and front of the crown shape it snugly to the contour of the head. Of course a hat of this type must be worn with appropriate clothes otherwise it would look absurd. But worn by the right type of woman in the right manner, it should be a grand success.

THE MAN WITH THE "HAIR-TRIGGER" TEMPER

He was irritable at the office, and grouchy at home. His enemies increased, his friends became fewer. Then one day his doctor told him the truth. He had been handicapped by constipation for years. It had brought headaches and constantly irritating ills to make him "touchy." It had stolen his energy and good nature.

His doctor suggested eating Kellogg's All-Bran regularly. And in a few days he was a changed man, cheery, ambitious — and on the road to success and happiness.

Constipation is so unnecessary it can be overcome by eating delicious Kellogg's All-Bran. This delightful, ready-to-eat cereal has been improved in both texture and taste.

Two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's All-Bran daily are guaranteed to prevent and relieve both temporary and recurring constipation. Use this natural method and avoid the dangers of habit-forming pills and drugs.

Serve All-Bran with milk or cream, with fruits or honey added. Use in cooking too. Sold by all grocers in the familiar red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Cathie Called to Testify In Murder Trial

CHAPTER L.

Court was adjourned. People began to file out, craning back to get another look at Cathie. She was broken. She sat with her limp white hands clasped in her lap, her head bowed over them. Chester Farnsworth had taken the oath like everyone else, he had mounted the stand and sworn to tell the truth . . . and then he'd lied . . . said she killed his father . . . and, why, why had he done it? Even if he did hate her how could he do it? How can anyone swear away another's life? And when they can . . . when God lets such things go on, what hope is there? What help is left?

"There, there," Ma crooned, close beside her, "don't cry, darlin'. It will come out all right. They'll have him for perjury, the low, snivelin' thing . . . there, there, darlin'—ma's here . . . ma'll stand by you."

Ma with her sweet tired face lit with love, ma hoping still . . ma believing . . .

"If I were hanged on the highest hill . . .

I know whose love would follow me still . . ."

Oh, how true that was . . . how true . . . oh, thank God for Ma, for dear, dear Ma. . . .

"Come, Mrs. Farnsworth!" A cold, authoritative voice at her elbow. The deputy sheriff and the policewoman, to take her back to jail.

"Goodbye, Ma!" Cathie opened her mouth to say the words, but only a broken sob came out.

The policewoman and the sheriff took her, each with a firm hand on her elbow, and marched her back to jail.

It was almost over. Mr. Allan and Mr. Gunther had thundered questions at Chester, and they couldn't trip him, they couldn't shake his testimony. He stuck to the story that he had first seen Cathie in the window, and that then seen her come to the window with the gun in her hand, after he heard the sound of the shot.

Evidence Exhibited

And there was Alfred Sells, the elevator operator, to verify the first sight of a woman in the window, and two other men, one a passerby, the other a butler in a house across the street, who had passed and seen Chester sitting on the curb, his head in his hands.

"Why didn't you come over to investigate?" Mr. Allan asked.

"I thought he was drunk," the butler said.

And then they brought out the blood-stained garments. . . . "People's exhibit number 7"—and Inspector Horgan told about finding them hidden away in the bottom of an old trunk in the attic . . . the silken things that were Cathie's, that Marguerite had hidden . . . . But Marguerite was gone, and nobody knew where she was. Who'd believe Cathie's story? Who'd believe anything she could say, after Chester's damning evidence, and the grisly exhibition of the clothes.

"The People rest," the district attorney said softly.

Ma wept silently into her handkerchief. Cathie hardly heeded. She thought, "It isn't true . . . things don't happen like this. . . ." But she knew it was true. . . . It had happened. Her dead husband's son had sworn falsely against her, and there was no help, no hope for her now.

Cathie Rehearses

They groomed her for it. They rehearsed it. They told her just how she was to answer, and what she was to wear. The new lustreless black silk dress with the touch of creamy ermine on the collar, black oxfords, with the sheerest black hose she had, a small black hat with a fold of white under the brim, and a black crepe veil that she was to throw back from her face, and let flow back over her shoulders.

Cathie fingered the crepe sadly. She had thought that widow's weeds were out of date, that only a few old-fashioned women like Ma clung to the fashion. And here they were making her wear them, to impress the jury . . . those people who sat in the box, all filled with their own thoughts, and decided your life for you, out of scraps of things that attorneys let the witnesses say, and not all of it true . . . some of it lies . . . lies . . .

Wearing widow's weeds. . . . She, Cathie . . . who was young, too young to wear anything but misses' things, less than a year ago.

"All ready?" The deputy sheriff and a policewoman came to take her to court.

"Good luck, and don't you get nervous now!" Mrs. Evans, the matron, waved her a cheerful goodbye.

"They'll wave me happy goodbyes when they take me to the gallows to hang me," Cathie thought cynically. She didn't believe in anyone but Ma and Gordon any more, and they wouldn't let her see Gordon. Gordon was to be kept away . . . he was to be a cool, well wishing, devoted, but not too devoted friend. . . .

So the only person in the world except Ma who loved her unselfishly must be denied her.

"Come, don't drag back, please, Mrs. Farnsworth," the policewoman said sharply.

Called to Stand

Cathie picked up her heavy feet faster. She let them lead her into the courtroom. It was full of people. There were people out in the halls, too, whom policemen were sending away. So many people really don't care what happens to you, like to watch you while your fate hangs in the balance, dipping first this way, then that way . . . waiting till the trial is over, then hurrying home to their safe houses, their husbands, their babies, their loving, lighted fires. . . .

"Mrs. Catherine Farnsworth."

Cathie felt eyes on her. Hundreds of eyes. Curious, morbid eyes. She made a supreme effort. Got up and walked, without stumbling, to the witness stand. And then, while the room swayed, and dipped and whirled all around her, she took the oath and forced herself to sit up, to listen to what they were saying to her.

All they had told her to say was gone. She looked into that crowd of strangers who had been watching her, and her heart failed her. She looked at the judge, with his little clipped mustache, and his cold in the head, and remembered that he had let Chester sit in this very chair, and lie. She looked at the jury, and saw the man with the grease spots on his vest staring at a woman whose fat legs were crossed, showing red garters. And the college-looking boy with the fraternity pins was trying to look bored like the newspaper men. He paid much more attention to them than to the witnesses. And the jury ladies were stirring tiredly, because it was a warm afternoon, and the trial was dragging out so many more days than people had expected. One of them was staring at Cathie's hat, wondering how much it cost probably. . . .

Tells Same Story

Oh, what did it matter? What could she say to convince them, when you could see their minds were all made up already?

Mr. Allan asked her questions, slowly, sympathetically. Mr. Macmillan flung his at her hard . . . rat, tat, tat. It made her think of when she was little and she tried to play ball with Eddie . . . he threw it so fast she couldn't ever catch it. . . . These questions from the district attorney were like that . . . too hard, too fast. She couldn't catch them and throw back the answers . . . oh, what was the use?

All over again she told her story. She was downstairs in the drawing room until about eleven. Yes, Mr. Moore was there too. What were they doing? Talking. Waiting for Mr. Farnsworth to come in. You see, they didn't know he had come in already.

And she went upstairs about eleven, and took a bath, and found the maid's note saying Mr. Farnsworth was ill, and didn't want to be disturbed.

Why didn't she go directly to bed, since she decided not to see her husband at once? She shook her head. For no reason. She just didn't, that was all. Had she looked out of the window? Yes, once—after the shot, when she thought it was a tire blowing out in the street—but her room was on the side of the house, and not in the front, like Mr. Farnsworth's.

Interruption while the plans of the house were shown to the jury.

Household Hints

The iron is often very hard to handle when steaming materials, but this can be overcome if you slip the handle of the iron into the space between the top and bottom of the sleeve board when it is resting on its side. This will enable you to turn the iron upside down with a good safe rest to hold it.

To freshen the atmosphere of the room that has been closed for a length of time, put some ground coffee on a saucer and in the center of the coffee place a small piece of gum camphor. Light the gum and as it burns the small amount of coffee consumed with it will produce a most refreshing odor.

A wise old banker once told me that a man's best credential for credit at a bank was a plain, sensible wife, and his worst a foolish, extravagant one.

Many wives are so over-anxious to make their husbands appear more successful than they really are, they dress and live far beyond their incomes to create that impression.

They may succeed in making some of their friends believe this, but they do not impress those who are waiting to have their bills paid. They become a "bad risk."

Love's Reawakening

Harry Threatens to Bring Veritzen to Account

Harry Underwood's ultimatum concerning Philip Veritzen brought his wife upright in her chair as if someone had suddenly charged her with electricity.

"No! Harry, No!" she said vehemently. "You must rein in your temper when you deal with him. Have you forgotten?"

Her husband's smile at her was invested with obstinacy.

"I have forgotten nothing, my dear," he said. "But, if I correctly understood the telephone message of our charming comrade-at-arms"—he cocked a gibing eyebrow at me—"the gifted Mr. Veritzen has been putting a private detective on the Underwood family and their friends. Now that isn't on the free list where I am concerned—and the gentleman's going to answer to me for his impudence."

Lillian's eyes, which had been fixed on her husband, came round to me for an instant, then went back to his face again. Did I fancy it, or had she sent a silent appeal to me in that flashing glance? I remembered the opinion, highly irritating to me but patently convincing to her, which she had voiced to me on more than one occasion—that I was the only person who could swerve Philip Veritzen from the strange cruel attitude toward Noel and Mary which seemed an obsession with him. But there also came before my eyes, like the shadows of lurking beasts in a jungle, the possible consequences to myself of such an intervention. I acquitted myself of the mean fear that I might lose my own lucrative position in the Veritzen organization. While I naturally should be unwilling to contemplate such a possibility, yet I knew that I never would let that consideration affect my actions. But I infinitely dreaded making the emotional appeal to Philip Veritzen on behalf of his son which I knew was the only possible chance of moving him from his fanatical stand.. Ever since my entrance into his organization I had been conscious of my employer's willingness to change our relation from a working comradeship to something less impersonal I took refuge in mid-Victorian phraseology even in thinking about it. That I was a coward I was painfully aware, knew also that my cowardice had its roots in an aversion to bringing out into the open something which my sub-consciousness told me was always lurking beneath my employer's apparently deferential admiration of my work.

There seemed no way out for me, however. That fleeting glance of Lillian's had brought to me memories of her frequent sacrifices of her own comfort, her necessities, even, upon one occasion, of her worldly reputation, for the supreme need of a friend. This present crisis was no affair of hers whatever. It was the happiness of Dicky's niece which was at stake, and he was powerless to aid her. I must adjust the burden to my own shoulders, carry it as best I might.

"Just a minute, Harry," I said quietly. "You know very well that Mr. Veritzen's espionage is not directed toward the Underwood family at all."

"How come?" he began truculently, then stopped with a shrewd glance at me.

"So you've figured it out, have you?" he asked.

"It isn't so difficult, is it?" I countered.

"No," he rejoined with a grin. "I believe it is one of those little things which Sherlock would miss as 'Elementary! Watson.' But that doesn't let me out, you know, Lady Fair."

"Of course it does," I retorted hotly.

"Suppose we let that ride," he drawled. "I've a yen to hear your theory of the performance old Phil staged yesterday and today. I can always work better when I have a thing out where I can look at it—or hear it."

His laugh was infectious and encouraging, and I marshaled the elements of my fantastic theory together, with the mental comment that in the light of Mr. Veritzen's activities the wild figment of my imagination had become probable truth.

"It's hard to believe so dastardly a thing of a man of Mr. Veritzen's position," I began.

"He isn't responsible, I'm sure," Lillian interposed charitably. "I'm angry enough at Phil to flay him alive, but I think just now he's a case for a strait-jacket, rather than a hangman. Sorry, Madge, didn't mean to interrupt, but—"

"But she can't just naturally rest unless she's finding some excuse even for a coyote," Lillian's husband said with an affectionately humorous look at her. "But I'll keep her gagged from now on. Go on, Lady Fair, trot out your great thoughts and send 'em around the track."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Wednesday, October 22

According to the sidereal operations for this time, this may prove to be a day of mixed influences. While new undertakings are under an encouraging sway, and even old affiliations and enterprises may receive a decisive push releasing old congestions and delayed conditions, yet an unfavorable aspect to Mars may stir up strife, litigation and turbulent conditions generally.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves under a conflicting state of affairs during the coming year. Although new enterprises may be auspiciously launched and old activities react to force breaking up of old congestions, yet there is a menace from a hostile Mars which may incite to tumultuous acts leading to serious dissension, litigation or unfortunate violence.

A child born on this day should be given early training and discipline in preserving its tongue and temper, lest a tendency to rash and tempestuous conduct frustrate favorable forces making for its success.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Use of Various Silverpieces

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I always seem to be ill at ease when out in company and I do not understand the use of silver. Can you tell me just where the steak knife is placed while you are not using it, also where the butter knife is placed?

2. Are the appetizers eaten before the soup?

3. Should the gentleman serve the lady the appetizers on the small plate at the left side of her? E. G. S.

1. Keep in mind—and this will always help you—that you use the silverpieces in order, beginning with the one farthest from the plate, and "progressing" toward the plate.

When you are not using a knife, after you have used it previously in a course, place it on the rim of your plate. Don't allow its handle to touch the table or cloth. Have a part of the handle and a part of the blade rest on the rim of the plate. In this position it will not be easy to push the knife from the plate.

When you have finished the course, place both your knife and fork in the center of the plate, together, parallel with each other, and with the handles turned slightly to the right. This position again offers the minimum of danger to their being pushed from the plate as the plate is being removed.

Now for the butter spreader. When we set the table we place this on the bread and butter plate, either parallel with the end of the table or parallel with the other silverpieces at the place. After we have used it, we place it diagonally on the bread and butter plate.

2. Yes.

3. No. The lady serves herself.

Addressing Formal Announcements

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am writing to you for advice as to the correct way of addressing and filling in birth announcement cards.

1.—I would like to know if it is correct to address the card to "Mr. and Mrs."?

2.—Does it make any difference if the person is a relative? For instance—to my sister. I believe it would be correct to include her husband.

As to friends, I feel that this affair is rather personal and should not include "Mr." I do not want to be unfair or partial when addressing the cards.

3.—"Mr. and Mrs." is printed on the card. Is it correct to fill out the card as "Mr. and Mrs. George Garretson?" I think it should be filled out as "Mr. and Mrs. George Garretson and Ida Garretson."

Reader.

1.—Yes, always address such announcements as you would any other kind of announcement—to "Mr. and Mrs. Henry Allen."

2.—No. It makes no difference that some of the cards are to be sent to relatives. You address them to husband and wife.

3.—Since, even with this type of announcement (the semi-engraved or semi-printed ones), the announcement is in the formal class, you would fill out the first space with the formal name: "Mr. and Mrs. George Garretson."

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Will Marriage to One Man or Woman Inoculate Us Against Loving the Rest of 'Em?

Will marriage automatically keep us loving and loyal?

Or must we fight temptation after marriage, just as we did before?

And is it up to us to keep our eyes to the front and our imaginations from wandering?

Beezy wants to know—Beezy, whose heart is skipping beats at the sight of an old schoolmate, even though she's happily married to a Grand Guy whom she's "sure she loves."

There are thousands of little girls like that—thousands of young wives who feel that marriage should render hearts immune against all romantic contagion, and who are terrified when they find that it doesn't. And so this letter is for them as well as for Beezy.

"Dearest Sally:

"Every day I read your column, and you seem to much like a mother to all the folks, that I am writing you to help me and give me some advice, because I feel myself 'slipping,' and I don't want to do it.

"I'm 21. And I'm married to just the sweetest husband in all this world. Maybe most wives think that about their husbands, but mine really is just wonderful. He is so good to me, and gives me everything that I want. He even bought me an automobile for a present on our first anniversary, which was in April of this year. And he's always so considerate about everything. And I do love him. Don't think I don't.

"But this past week, I met one of my old sweethearts, and when I saw him, my heart surely missed a beat. He was one of my most attentive beaux before I was married. He also asked me to marry him, but I turned him down for Tom. So now I just can't understand myself, because down in my heart I have a longing to see more of him.

"I know that this would be very wrong, and very unjust to the wonderful man I did marry, but I can't seem to help it. I know my husband is absolutely true to me, and I know that I should be true to him. But it seems that wherever I go, I bump into this old friend, and I know that he loves me, too, as he has told me so many times already.

"What can I do, Sally, to forget him and keep him out of my thoughts? I find myself thinking about him, all the time, and it seems that I want to be with him. I try to forget him, but I just can't. Tom is awfully good-looking, and this other fellow is not, at all. But there seems to be something about him that just draws me to him. What can it be?

"One thing about Tom is that he is very jealous of me, because so many people seem to find me attractive, but I never want to fall for anyone else. And I am afraid when I think of Bill.

"Don't you think it is wrong to feel that way, when I am married? Can I really be in love with Tom when I do it? If I did love him truly, do you think I'd be interested in any other man like this? Oh, I feel so bewildered and so sort of scared!

Please help me. I'll be watching for your answer. I just don't know what to do or think, myself. Why am I like this? What is it that draws me to Bill?

"BEEZY."

So you have a wandering imagination, have you, honey?

And it scares you?

Well, let me whisper a little secret in your ear. We all have 'em! But whether they'll run us into trouble or not is up to us.

You see, faith and fineness and loyalty don't just happen without any effort on our part. If we want them, we have to work for them. And we can work for them, if we have the spunk and sense to do it. We don't have to keep, or act upon, these wandering wisps of impulse and fancy that try to take root in our minds. We can deliberately pick other things to think about and to be interested in. And unless you want to hit a mighty bad snag, my dear, you'd better do it, pronto.

What is it that draws you to Bill?

Well, it may look to you like the budding sprouts of Romance, but my guess is that it's nothing more than curiosity. That and an itch to play around the fascinating edges of danger.

You married Tom instead of Bill, because you loved him. And for a while your marriage was a thrilling, fascinating adventure. Then the novelty began to wear off a little. . . and just about the time that happened, Bill stepped back into the picture, and you began to wonder a little. What would life with him have been like? What sort of a husband would he have made? And so you caught your breath, and thrilled a little, looking into the unknown pasture across your neighbor's fence. You began to drift on impulse.

I suspect too, that life's been too easy for you. You haven't enough to do. You haven't enough to keep either your hands or your mind busy and out of mischief.

And the cure?

Find yourself something to do. Something that will interest you and keep you on the jump to keep up with it! Fill your mind so full of something worthwhile that you have no time or space for drifting or mooning or romantic speculation! And what'll that something be? Have a baby! That's the best cure for empty hands and foolish fancies!

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Upset System a Cause of Hives

Any swelling of the skin, developing suddenly, may be considered a form of hives. It is a troublesome and irritating ailment to have. One form which is very common is called "nettle-rash." There are small, red spots. The skin feels quite as though a poisonous nettle had been drawn across its surface. It burns, smarts and itches intolerably.

DR COPELAND

Another less common variety is known as "giant hives." In this there is a single very large swelling. This may be filled with blood.

If you have hives you will be pleased to know the trouble may last for only a few hours. Unfortunately it may go on for days. The swellings may disappear and then reappear.

Although hives may appear at any time of life, it is an ailment most common in childhood. It is unlikely to attack unless there is a weakened condition of the system or a considerable degree of undernourishment.

It is usual to find that some sort of food poisoning caused this ailment. There is a close sympathetic relationship between the digestive tract and the skin. When the stomach is upset or some toxic poisons are found in the intestines then hives appear.

There are drugs which are capable of exciting skin trouble. Quinine, cubebs and various coaltar drugs are numbered among such.

Sometimes the inflammation is really acute. Fever and delirium may come on and the patient is decidedly ill. It is not pleasant to have such an attack.

The quicker the cause is removed the better. It is wise to consult a doctor whenever hives last more than an hour.

It helps the itching and inflammation very much to apply locally a solution of hyposulphite of soda. Dissolve a tablespoonful in half a glass of water and with it mop the inflamed skin. If the whole body is involved a half pound of the hyposulphite may be poured into a bathtub half full of water. The patient may bathe in it for some 20 minutes.

The bowels should be thoroughly cleansed and the diet be limited for a few days. Your physician will know better than anyone else what to do.

Every Grid Seat Gone. Demand Exceeds Supply. All-America Panthers. Tauscher to Senators. Sacrifice Fly Opposed. Shifting of Ice Pilots.

COULD HAVE SOLD 100,000 TICKETS

THOUGH IT IS assured that the big football battle between Pitt and Notre Dame here next Saturday will be witnessed by a crowd filling every inch of available space at The Stadium—70,000 beyond a doubt and 75,000 if they can be squeezed in—even that fact does not fully show the drawing power of the game. For only the size of the bowl will limit the attendance to those figures. It was just because the last general admission ticket had been gobbled up that the sale stopped at noon yesterday. There wasn't the slightest let down in the demand.

W. Don Harrison

In announcing a complete sell-out, with not a solitary pasteboard left, even though more temporary field seats have been built than ever before were necessary, W. Don Harrison, director of athletics at Pitt, estimated that from 90,000 to 100,000 tickets could have been sold. More than $3,000 is being returned to fans because their orders came in too late. Hundreds of applicants were turned away at The Stadium offices yesterday and fully 1,000 telephone callers were informed that everything had been sold out.

THE DISAPPOINTMENT EXPERIENCED by thousands in learning that they could not wait until the last minute and expect to get good seats probably will have the effect of spurring them to send in their orders earlier for games at The Stadium in future. Tickets for big games in other parts of the country are sold out weeks in advance because the fans order them early, and that is likely to be the case in Pittsburgh hereafter. Such an effect is already noted in the rush of applicants for tickets to the Pitt-Carnegie Tech clash on November 8. To date 25,000 seats have been sold and the demand is growing daily, indicating another crowd of near-capacity, at least.

Further disappointment may be averted by those holding tickets for next Saturday's game by going to The Stadium early. A crowd of 70,000 to 75,000 cannot be seated in 20 minutes, and if the patrons wait until shortly before the kick-off at 2 o'clock a big jam is certain to result. Besides, the late comers will miss a big special spectacle, a military drill like the old pre-game features of Army-Navy meetings. In this drill 620 uniformed students will appear, 120 in the band and 500 R. O. T. C., uniformed alike in dark blue suits, with splashes of gold trimming. It will be necessary to be at The Stadium at 1 o'clock to see the whole show and get your seat in comfort.

SATURDAY'S GAME WILL be the first real test showing whether or not the Panthers this year are going to keep up their record of getting a representative on the all-America team annually. They have not missed in the last three years and have failed only once in the last five seasons.

Nine Pitt stars all told have won all-America honors, starting in 1915. The only one ever to win that distinction twice was Bob Peck, famous center. In 1915 he became the first all-America Panther and Walter Camp picked him again in 1916.

Bob Peck

TOM DAVIES, halfback, followed Peck on the all-America in 1918, his freshman year, Leonard Hilty, tackle, was named the same season, but this appointment was due to a mix-up in names, as it was Camp's intention to honor Lou Mervis at that position. Herb Stein, center, made the mythical team in 1920, and Horse Chase received an award at tackle in 1925. No appointments came to Pitt in 1926, but the Panthers have been honored in each season since. Gibby Welch, halfback, gained a berth in 1927, Mike Getto was chosen at tackle in 1928, and last year saw Joe Donchess and Ray Montgomery named at end and guard, respectively.

JOCK SUTHERLAND and Knute Rockne, rival coaches clashing for the first time, in the big game here next Saturday, never met on the field as opposing players during the days when they were active gridders. Rockne played at end for Notre Dame against Pitt in 1911 and 1912, but Sutherland had not yet appeared.

Sutherland's record as a player, by the way was a remarkable one. In his four seasons of play at guard for Pitt in 1914, 1915, 1916 and 1917 he was in a losing game only once, his lone taste of defeat coming in a 13-to-10 reverse at the hands of W. & J. in 1914.

AS A COACH, too, Sutherland has made a record that few front-rank mentors have equaled. Since he took charge at Pitt in 1924, the Panthers have played a total of 60 games, and of these they have won no fewer than 45, while tying five and losing only 10.

Walter Tauscher

Three of the defeats were suffered in Jock's first year as coach here, 1924, when Pitt lost to Lafayette, Carnegie Tech and Wash-Jeff. The Panthers were beaten by Lafayette in 1925, by Lafayette and Carnegie Tech in 1926, by Stanford after the season of 1927, by Carnegie and West Virginia in 1928 and by Southern California after the regular campaign of 1929. Two of the tie games were played with W. & J., and one each with Syracuse, Georgetown and Nebraska.

THE SUCCESS OF Joe Cronin, Alvin Crowder and Roy Spencer in Washington uniforms evidently has led Clark Griffith and Walter Johnson to believe that there is luck in former Pirate material, as they have added another ex-Buccaneer in the person of Walter Tauscher. This big right-hander, who received a series of trials with the Corsairs starting in 1927, was drafted from the Dallas club, of the Texas League. Tauscher's record for 1930 was not impressive, but Griffith thinks this was due to his having a poor club behind him. Among 14 other new players, Washington has selected from its Chattanooga farm, Bill Bayne, former Wilkinsburg left-hand pitcher, who had three earlier American League trials with the Browns, Indians and Red Sox.

THE EFFORT PLANNED by President E. S. Barnard, of the American League, to have the sacrifice fly abolished as part of the baseball scoring system, will not lack for support. Many fans have contended for a long time that it is absurd to credit a batter with a sacrifice when he has tried to knock the ball out of the lot.

A bunt sacrifice is different, of course, as that is a deliberate throwing away of a batting chance in order to advance a runner. The object of the misnamed sacrifice fly rule, of course, is to reward a hitter by exempting him from a time at bat when he knocks in a run or advances a runner anywhere on the bases, but it is manifestly unfair to give such recognition to the batter who does it by knocking a fly and not to give the same reward to the batter who accomplishes just as much by hitting a grounder.

A PROPOSAL TO abolish the All-Marine football and baseball teams is before Maj. Gen. Ben H. Fuller for decision, and his verdict is expected at an early date. Sentiment in service circles for doing

PANTHERS HIT BY INJURIES

BAN ON PLAYER RILES BEARS' COACH

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21.—(INS.)—An exceedingly acrimonious controversy broke out yesterday between Clarence L. (Nibs) Price, the diminutive football coach at the University of California, and Glenn S. (Pop) Warner, director of gridiron destinies at Stanford University.

The row followed the announcement that Nick Bican, California lineman, had been declared ineligible because of a protest from Stanford that he had played freshman ball at Willamette in 1926.

"If it takes that kind of sleuthing, the most unsportsmanlike I ever heard of, to be a coach at Stanford, I'm glad I haven't got the job," Price went on bitterly at his home in Berkeley.

However, at the Warner abode in Palo Alto, Pop protested vehemently that he didn't have anything to do with Bican's misfortune, and charged that Price was "just trying to stir up a lot of hatred toward Stanford."

"It's for Bican's sake that I'm riled up," Price continued.

"He's not the best football player in the world, and probably never would have seen action against either Stanford or U. S. C.

EYE OF YALE STAR SAVED

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—A delicate operation was performed in a hospital here yesterday to save the left eye of Charley Snead, Yale halfback, who was hurt in practice and had the injury aggravated in the Maryland game two weeks ago.

Dr. Eugene M. Blake, describing the operation as serious, said last night that his patient was responding favorably and that he believed it would be entirely successful.

While no definte announcement has been made, it is believed that the football days of Snead, the only Yale man ever to win three major Y's as a sophomore, are over. He is a senior.

Besides football, he plays baseball and hockey. His home is in Montclair, N. J.

Yanks Send Two Hurlers to Seals

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Acquisition of two right-handed pitchers from the New York Yankees, in connection with the deal that will send Frankie Crosetti, Seal shortstop, to the Yanks in 1932, was announced today by Secretary George A. Putnam, of the San Francisco club. The twirlers are Will Henderson, who finished the season with Oakland, and Sam Gibson, who played with Toronto of the International League this year.

Putnam said the Seals had one more player coming in the deal for Crosetti which involved approximately $100,000 in players and cash.

Sheely, Former Buc, Coast League Champ

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21.—(INS.)—Hitting the ball at a .402 clip, Earl Sheely, San Francisco first baseman, led Pacific Coast League batsmen this season, according to figures released today.

Rockne Invites Questions from Grid Fans

Have you sent in your question to Knute Rockne?

The great Knute, coach of the Notre Dame football team, is to broadcast over Station WJAS and the Columbia System Friday night, when he will be quizzed by Christy Walsh, his syndicate manager, on the Wrigley period.

He has asked the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph to have its readers submit questions to him. Upon his arrival Friday morning he will pick out the 10 questions he believes most interesting and will answer them in his talk that night.

The writers of the 10 questions will receive two tickets each for the Pitt-Carnegie Tech game at the Stadium, November 8.

As the talk will be over a national hookup, Rockne requests that the questions be of a general rather than a local nature, although he invites queries about his team's games with Pitt and Tech this season.

Address your queries to the Knute Rockne Editor, Pittsburgh Sun Telegraph, then tune in on the broadcast Friday night.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: COLONEL HESTER—When the New Orleans Cotton Exchange was opened in January, 1871, Colonel Hester was appointed superintendent and shortly thereafter was elected to fill the joint office of superintendent-secretary. Since that date he has been elected annually to the same office. Colonel Hester, who now is 84 years of age, is known in New Orleans as "The Grand Old Man of the Cotton Trade." BUSTER MOTT RAN 58 YARDS THE FIRST TIME HE TOUCHED THE BALL—The Georgia-Oglethrope game on September 27, 1930, was the first college game in which Norman H. Mott, a University of Georgia boy from Atlanta, participated. The first time he touched the ball he made a touchdown from Georgia's 42-yard line. A few minutes later, the second time he carried the ball, he made a 65-yard run for another touchdown.

TOMORROW—THE TREE THAT FED ON BEER

W. & J. FACES SHAKEUP

WASHINGTON, Pa., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—The Presidents of Washington and Jefferson will have new faces in the lineup when they meet Lafayette Saturday night in an indoor game at the Atlantic City, N. J. auditorium. Coach Bill Amos told his team yesterday how dissatisfied he was with the defensive play against Temple and then started to revamp his line.

The Presidents will brush up on passing this week as well as defensive play. They drilled on signals yesterday and today will work on new defensive tactics.

MAROON LIMBERS UP

EASTON, Pa., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—As the Lafayette football squad took the field yesterday for a brief limbering up drill, it was indicated that little strenuous work will be given the players before they meet Washington and Jefferson at Atlantic City, Saturday. Coach Herb McCracken intimated that scrimmage would not be part of the week's preparation. Fisher and Hughes, who were injured during the scoreless tie against Penn State, reported with the squad, but were given no work.

Hoskins to Train Bucknell Gridders

LEWISBURG, Pa., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—George Hoskins, trainer for the Cincinnati National League Baseball Club, has joined the Bucknell football squad in the capacity of trainer. He succeeds George Kling, who has been ill, but is now serving the squad in another capacity.

Hoskins coached the Bisons in the late nineties and was in charge when the team defeated Penn State for the first time. He subsequently went to Penn State, where his Nittany Lions turned the tables on his erstwhile Bucknell charges.

Sport Vignettes

It is not generally known, but Coach Jock Sutherland, of Pitt, is getting by this season with one of the smallest football squads in the institution's recent history . . . With a few of his men laid up with injuries, he does not even have three full teams available for practice and the games . . . This despite the fact that each fall he issues a call for all available talent and a huge gob of players turns out, only to become early discouraged and give up the battle . . . Jock tries to impress on everyone that none of his teams are hand-picked and that any player with ability has a chance to show what he can do . . . The Pitt system, however, is so intricate and painstaking that none but the hardy-hearted survive.

Jock Sutherland

Just a word for Jock and his system . . . You have seen many teams play more spectacular football, from the viewpoint of the fans, but none with a sounder foundation of fundamental training . . . Everything must click perfectly and be fool-proof . . . By attaining such a high degree of efficiency, Sutherland-coached teams accomplish with a minimum of fuss and activity and less waste motion what other elevens do in such a manner and with such flourish as to make the playing seem extremely difficult . . . Sutherland's conservative methods have proved themselves across the years . . . Suffice to say that no sounder or saner system of play exists in the game . . . Sutherland football is team football to the nth degree, the underlying principle being to get 11 men into every play.

The reason players are running back so many kickoffs for touchdowns this fall is NOT because they are using a lively pigskin, and you may lay to that . . . If Notre Dame goes on to win the national championship again this fall, it will be quite a feat, for, following the tough battle with Carnegie Tech last Saturday, all the Irish have to do until the curtain falls is to defeat Pitt here next Saturday and then take on Indiana, Pennsylvania, Northwestern, Army and Southern California, in that order. The Southern California game is scheduled on the Coast December 6.

DUKES TO GET THIRD DEGREE

The tackling dummy is due to take an awful lambasting this week from the Durable Duquesne Dukes. The third degree on that piece of gridiron practice equipment is scheduled to begin on the Duke campus today, and Head Coach Elmer Layden and Joe Bach, who presides over the Night Rider line, will see that there is no letup in the punishment. The Duke coaches might not go so far as to say that the tackling of their charges has been poor for the past two weeks, but you gather that general impression from talking to them about the team.

They used to call the national championship eleven at Notre Dame, the Four Horsemen and the Eleven Mules, and the Duke first-string team seems to be imitating that combination in a revised form. Only the Mules are in the backfield and the line appears composed of saw horses. That is how you summarize the situation after a chat with the mentorial staff on the Bluff.

When the full import of a tough situation like that sinks in upon your gridiron-warped mind you are then informed that the Dukes meet a highly-touted Catholic University eleven Friday night under the lights at Forbes Field and that the Washington, D. C., team will have its full strength for the first time this season. It is just one of those situations which convince coaches that if you are only as old as you feel, you would shame Methuselah.

Dutch Bergman, former Notre Dame star, who is head coach at Catholic University, is aided by Louis Gross, former star tackle at Minnesota University, and the two gridiron greats have evolved the best combination in years at Catholic U. The persistent injuries which have followed the Brookland Stadium gridders are now in the past, and the Dukes will face the Notre Dame system for the third successive Friday night.

HOOD, QUATSE MAY NOT PLAY AGAINST IRISH

With the Stadium completely sold out already for the game with Notre Dame next Saturday, Pitt today turned its thoughts to the preparation of its team for the battle.

There is plenty to worry about. Both Franklin Hood, the star fullback, and Jess Quatse, star tackle, came out of the Syracuse game last Saturday badly banged up.

As a result, the lineup for the meeting with the Irish is very much in doubt, as it is questionable if Jim MacMurdo, end, and Hart Morris, guard, who were unable to play against the Orange, will be available.

CLARK AT FULLBACK

Indications are that Jim Clark, who made his first start of the season against Syracuse, when he got in as a sub for Hood, will start at fullback, with Milligan again likely in Hart Morris' place and Ed Hurshberg back at end relieving Daily, who got his first baptism of fire in a big game against Syracuse and did very well, but is a little bit short on experience for a tussle such as the one with Notre Dame. There is a possibility that Jim MacMurdo will be able to get back into the game in time to start at the other end, with Collins being held in reserve.

With Clark at fullback, Capt. Eddie Baker, the quarterback, will back up the line on defense, as he did at Syracuse after Hood was taken out, letting Clark go back to the safety position.

It developed yesterday that Hood's old knee injury came back on him in the first half against Syracuse and this was the reason he was taken out. He did not start the second half and would have been rested for the remainder of the game but for the fact that he pleaded to be permitted to return to the game to carry the ball over from the one-foot line in the fourth period after two of his teammates had been unable to advance the oval. He was withdrawn from the contest again as soon as he performed this duty. This was his sixth touchdown of the year.

NOTABLES AT SMOKER

With Hood injured and Clark just getting back on his feet, Pitt is sorely handicapped in the fullback department. Bucky Wagner, who had been subbing there with great gusto, has been shifted back to quarter, because Curti is out with a bad shoulder. The only other fullback is Luch, and he lacks experience.

In addition to Coach Knute Rockne, of Notre Dame, Chancellor John G. Bowman, Athletic Director W. Don Harrison and Coach Jock Sutherland will be speakers at the annual homecoming game smoker to be held at the University Club Friday night. The Notre Dame squad arrives in town Friday for a workout before the tussle.

As a result of the banged-up condition of the squad, it is unlikely that there will be any scrimmaging for Pitt this week. Yesterday's session consisted of counting the cripples and going through a light signal drill.

TECH GRIDDERS GIVEN REST

Bruised, battered and depressed after their decisive trimming at the hands of Notre Dame last Saturday, Carnegie Tech's varsity football players were excused from practice yesterday afternoon, and for the first week-day since last August 28, when the linemen reported for fall practice, not a varsity man was on Tech Field. Paul Allison had his Plebes out for a brief drill, but they also went through a tough battle on Saturday, and were not pushed by their coach in yesterday's workout.

Bob Waddell notified his squad to report today for work. The boys will not be pushed at all this week, as they have been tearing in to their work for so long now that a rest is absolutely necessary.

The Western Reserve game next Saturday comes at a most opportune time. Although Waddell plans to start most of his regulars against the Clevelanders, he wants to pull them out of action as early as possible in order to save them for New York University, which looms as a bigger threat each Saturday.

Although many of the Tartans were used against Notre Dame, only George Kavel and Alex Ducanis will not be able to rejoin their mates today. The Irwin boy, who was hurt on the first play last Saturday, will require several more days to recuperate, while Ducanis' injured ankle will require possibly 10 days to mend completely.

Slats Flanagan will assume the right halfback duties today, with Red Jones filling in for Ducanis. These two chaps are likely to be found at those berths against Western Reserve on Saturday.

M'TIERNAN WINS, LAWLESS GETS DECISION

BUCK VICTIM OF ABSURD VERDICT

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Buck McTiernan, of Swissvale, fought one of his best fights at Motor Square Garden last night to defeat Bucky Lawless, of Syracuse, N. Y., in the 10-round windup, but so swell was the judging and refereeing again that he didn't get a single vote. Judge Frank Brown voted for Lawless and Referee Robinson agreed with him, while Judge Frank Ferris called it a draw. The result was that Lawless is the absurd official victor, although he won only three of the 10 rounds, with McTiernan carrying all of the other seven.

LAWLESS A SHOWMAN

It was a fast fight, with McTiernan the aggressor in all but the three rounds scored for Lawless. Buck was traveling at too fast a pace and not only outboxed Lawless and landed the cleaner punches from the outside, but, in the majority of rounds that he carried, also outfought the Syracusan in the clinches. As a matter of fact, he appeared more rugged in a fighting sense than in a long time.

Bucky was very smart and executed a number of maneuvers calculated to play to the fans and officials. One of his favorite tricks was to wrestle his opponent out of position, a la the late Harry Greb, and then to refrain from taking advantage of him. He drew a hand for this a few times, whereas he really merited a warning for wrestling from the referee.

Both men were down once, but they were not real knockdowns. The third of Lawless' opening rushes in the opening round pushed McTiernan to one knee, but he was up immediately. Just before the fourth round ended, Lawless ran blindly into a straight left and sat down heavily.

BUCKY IN DANGER

The eighth round was the most decisive of the fight, and it saw McTiernan belt Lawless about under a merciless barrage of left hooks to the head and body, mixed with a succession of rights to the head, until Bucky began to waver and sag at the knees as he bicycled about the ring with the crowd up yelling for McTiernan to knock him out. At no time was the local man in any such danger.

It was a hollow "victory" that Lawless carted off with him at the finish, but he is in a position to make much capital of it, in view of the fact that he came in at 146 pounds, while McTiernan scaled 153½, and lost his weight forfeit, which it is said called for 153 pounds, although the original agreement was 154 pounds.

WILSON BEATS MENDOZA

The preliminaries were poor, so that the main bout in comparison stood out like a million dollars for speed and action. Jack Wilson, of the North Side, 159 pounds, beat Jose Mendoza, of Youngstown, 160, all of the way in the eight-round semi-final, but did such a listless job of it that the fans were on him almost all of the time. He rocked his opponent repeatedly and then stood back or tapped lightly until Jose could recover. Mendoza was billed as the Cuban Wonder, but the only wonder about him was how he happened to land a semi-final bout.

Tracey Rhodes, southpaw Negro, of the South Side, 150½, showed a lot of gamness in standing up under a pounding from Al Becker, of Sheraden, 157, in the second bout, while, in the opener, Mose Butch, of Oakland, 122, handed a lacing to Claire Repole, of Homewood, 122, flooring Claire for counts of two in the first round and eight in the second and having him virtually out at the bell in the opening session. Repole rallied to win the sixth round when Butch tired.

ROCCO TO BOX PANKA

It was announced that Emmett Rocco, of Ellwood City, who last week defeated Tom Heeney in the Garden ring, will box George Panka, Ho[illegible] in the windup next Monday night. Joe Sekyra, of Dayton, formerly was matched with Panka.

Max Zeugschmidt and Norman Borland were the timers and Harry Haas was the announcer. Al Grayber alternated with Robinson as referee.

Between Rounds

The Moose Temple Club will get away from double windup cards in its show this week, presenting a 10-round main bout and three six-rounders Friday night. Harry Harris, of Bellaire, O., and Indian Tiger West, of Monessen, meet in the windup, and Paul Oger, of Wheeling, and Jimmy Kelly, of the North Side, in the semi-final, while Young Jack McVey will be one of the principals in the second bout.

The Babe Ruth-Freddie Miller bout is in as the main event at Wheeling next Monday night, according to Promoter George K. Brown, who denies he has signed Tommy Crawley and Midget Mike O'Dowd as his headliners, as reported.

The outdoor amateur boxing show carded at the Twenty-seventh Ward A. C., on the North Side tonight has been abandoned because of the cold weather.

Jack Gagnon and Con O'Kelly, heavies, box in Boston tonight, with the winner promised a match with Jack Sharkey if the latter can be induced to take him on. Herman Batzlaff boxes Red Uhlan at Portland, Ore., and Harry Dillon meets Chuck Burns at Indianapolis.

M'TIERNAN LAWLESS

Infantile Paralysis Hits Amherst Card

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—The scheduled Wesleyan-Amherst football game here Saturday has been cancelled at the request of Amherst authorities because of the prevalence of infantile paralysis in Middletown, Herbert Connelly, alumni secretary of Wesleyan, said last night.

Connelly said that the Amherst administration committee met yesterday and decided to request cancellation of the first of the "Little Three" games.

Several deaths, including one student, have resulted from an outbreak of infantile paralysis here. About 10 persons now are under treatment in a Middletown hospital.

Colgate Varsity Gets Added Rest

HAMILTON, N. Y., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Colgate's football regulars got an added day of rest from practice yesterday, to give them plenty of time for full recovery from the effects of their losing game with Michigan State Saturday and their long trip of invasion.

Today, however, Coach Andy Kerr intimated, they will be back at work in earnest, preparing for the trip into Pennsylvania to meet Penn State.

The rest of the squad went through a more or less perfunctory drill, with some emphasis being placed on mistakes made in the game Saturday.

IOWA RECUPERATES

SHEA STOPS JOHNNY DATTO IN FOURTH

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Eddie Shea, Chicago battler, moved up a notch last night in his bid for the featherweight title by knocking out Johnny Datto, Filipino, of Cleveland, in the fourth round of the scheduled 10-round main event at the Arena. Shea scaled 126½ and Datto 125½.

A sizzling right to the jaw sent Datto down and out less than half a minute after the fourth round began. He lay motionless while the referee counted him out, while Shea, jubilant over winning a bout in a Philadelphia ring, turned a cartwheel and waved his hands to the fans.

Phil Zwick, 126, Cleveland, was awarded the dicision over Eddie Cool, 126, Philadelphia, in the third, when the referee stopped the bout, claiming Cool was not trying.

BAT FOULS ZAZZARINO

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Young Zazzarino, of Jersey City, won from Bat Battalino, of Hartford, Conn., featherweight champion, on a foul in the third round of a scheduled 10-round non-title bout at the Oakland A. A. here last night. Zazzarino, at 127½ pounds, was a pound and a half over the class limit. Battalino weighed 126.

It was a fast and furious battle as far as it went. The champion held an edge in the first round, but Zazzarino got going in the second and won it by a decisive margin.

They battled away on even terms in the third round until Battalino landed a low left hook that disabled Zazzarino. Referee Danny Sullivan stepped in and awarded the fight to the Jersey City boy.

JIMMY BELMONT BOWS

OIL CITY, Pa., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Ted Yarosz, 146, of Monaca, outpointed Jimmy Belmont, 148, Braddock, in the 10-round main bout of a fight card here last night.

Jack Tracey, 153, Louisville, Ky., knocked out Leo Genet, 151, of Barberton, O., in the second round of a scheduled six-round semi-final bout. Frankie Porto, 126, East Liverpool, O., won by a technical knockout over Jesse Duke, 131, Dubois, Pa.

Boxer Collapses In Ring, Succumbs

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Carl Baldus, Harlem light-heavyweight, collapsed and died in the ring of the New Lenox Sports Club here last night.

Baldus was matched in a four-round preliminary bout with Larry Hogan. After fairly even battling for two rounds, Baldus fell to the floor in the third round without being hit. The club physician, Dr. Perry Lichtenstein, was called and pronounced him dead.

Hogan, a Negro, was arrested on a technical charge of homicide.

KIPKE POLISHES DEFENSE

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 21.—(AP.)—Coach Harry Kipke began work on two defense problems at Michigan yesterday—one against Illinois formation and the other against overconfidence. Their 13-to-0 victory over Ohio State Saturday, and Northwestern's overwhelming triumph over Illinois, left the Wolverines a little cocky and Kipke warned them against picking the Illini for a setup.

METZGER, IRISH STAR, BRAINY PLAYER

By JESS CARVER,
Staff Correspondent.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 21.—"Say, while we are sittin' here gabbing, what did you think of this kid Metzger?"

Thus spake Knute Rockne, as I sat and watched him give his Notre Dame football squad a brisk drill yesterday afternoon, the first workout of the week in preparation for the all-important game with Pitt in Pittsburgh Saturday.

"He looked pretty sweet, Rock," I answered. "Looks like he's going to be another Jack Cannon."

"Well, I'll tell you. He isn't as big as Jack, and naturally he isn't as clever, seein' as how he's not had Jack's experience, but let me tell you, he's got all the heart in the world, and he'll stick in there all afternoon against any ball club. He is one player, if ever there was such a thing, who makes brains and guts make up for lack of weight."

IRISH LINE STRONG

Metzger played a bang-up game against Carnegie Tech last week. In reality, Rock was a bit dubious about the little fellow previous to the game. Metzger, a protege of Len Sachs when the present Loyola University basketball coach was the mentor at Loyola Academy, has been understudying various guards at Notre Dame for two years. Last year he subbed for the great Cannon. This year he's in there, and, judging from the football he played against Tech, he's due to stick.

The Notre Dame line is the weapon which Pitt must fear Saturday. It is natural for a team to respect a backfield, especially one as classy as Rockne's Carideo-Brill-Schwartz-Savoldi combine, but too often a team may be prone to laugh off an opponent's forward wall. The results of such chuckling nearly always is fatal.

The Notre Dame line, until last week, was more or less of an unknown quantity. Rockne himself didn't know how good it was, and for that reason, he was honest when he predicted that Tech would take his ball club over the jumps. Now he knows that the boys are there. Result—Look out Mr. Sutherland, and look out, Mr. Sutherland's backfield.

Yesterday's drill here was a brief one, with a dozen or so of the regulars awarded a day of rest as a reward for their triumph over Carnegie. The Irish came out of the game in fine physical trim, Frank Carideo being the only regular to be injured at all seriously, Frank suffering a pulled muscle in his thigh. He will be out for drill today, and unless the hurt is aggravated during the week (and you can bet the rent it won't be) he'll be in there matching brains with Eddie Baker Saturday.

SACHS' PRODUCT

To return for a brief paragraph or two to Metzger. Metz was trained in his prep school days by Len Sachs, who brought that fine Loyola University team to Pittsburgh last winter to meet the Dukes in basketball, and, after losing a tough ball game, refused to alibi, grasped Chick Davies by the hand and congratulated him on having a great team, and wished Chick and his Dukes all the success in the world for the remainder of the year.

Sachs taught Metzger the fundamentals of football. He taught him how to block, to clip, to tackle and handle himself without being hurt. The little chap (he weighs less than 160) stepped into the shoes vacated by the famous Cannon, shoes most observers thought would be far too great for him to fill, and to date, has left nothing to be desired.

"And he's a great kid," Rockne continued picking up the conversation I started to report. "He'll do what he's told. He gives everything he has on every play. If he's hurt, do you think he shows it? Not for a second. He's right in there on the next play, fighting as hard as ever, giving his opponent everything he has, and I might add, it usually is plenty."

Rockne plans to give his squad a more strenuous and tedious drill this afternoon and tomorrow. His scouts brought back alarming reports of the strength of the crippled Pitt team, exhibited in beating Syracuse. Rockne and his aides went into a long huddle yesterday, revising their plans of defense and working out some new ideas on attack.

SACRIFICE FLY RULE FLAYED BY BARNARD

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—(AP.)—President E. S. Barnard, of the American League, yesterday said he would seek elimination of the sacrifice fly from the major-minor baseball rules when the joint rule committee meets next December.

Under present rules, any fly ball that advances a runner one or more bases whether intentional or not, is counted as a sacrifice. President Barnard seeks to eliminate it from the rules altogether and count only an intentional bunt, which advances a runner, as a sacrifice.

"The sacrifice fly is one of the most absurd rules in baseball," President Barnard explained, almost every time one is hit, it is merely a stroke of luck. The batter gets up and swings, and if he is lucky enough to hit a long fly that advances a good runner one base, he is credited with a sacrifice and no time at bat."

For many years, only an intentional bunt was scored as a sacrifice when advancing a runner. Two years ago, the sacrifice rule was loaded up to include the sacrifice fly.

TUBERS BATTLE BURNS

TOMORROW'S VICTOR LIKELY TO COP TITLE

By TOM BIRKS.

The outstanding battle of the Western Pennsylvania Independent Gridiron Conference this week will be flashed at Parnassus High School field, under the flood lights, tomorrow evening when the McKeesport Olympics, leading the loop, hook up with Burns A. A.

This is the game upon which many feel the championship of the loop rests. Should the Olympics cop, it is hard to see just how the Iverson aggregation can be nosed out. And the splendid Tube City line, with its great backfield, looks to be good enough to turn the trick.

Burns realizes just how important this game is. In the absence of Dick Goldberg, Heinzer, Al Dunn and Jimmy Smith controlled the final practice session last evening, and lookers-on claim it was by far the best workout the famous Black and White machine has had this season.

UANSA, PARKINSON FINED

Just as many fans figured Toby Uansa and Tom Parkinson were conspicuous by their absence. Manager Jimmy Smith announced at the end of yesterday's workout that another fine of $25 had been added to $10 fine already inflicted for being absent at the practice session last week.

Smith also announced that should the former Pitt players fail to report for the Olympic game, they will be suspended indefinitely, which will eliminate them from playing further with any club in the conference. They cannot get their release, under the rules of the conference, unless Smith cares to give it to them, and the registration lists close November 1.

Uansa and Parkinson probably will get little sympathy from the fans on their stand in the matter. Burns officials have been generous with them, paying each player $100 a game, and, upon their showing to date, it is hard to see where either has set the conference on fire.

OFFENSIVE LACKING

The poor showing of the club, especially on the offense, when all of the backfield, including Parkinson and Uansa, fumbled in the Olympic game, caused Smith to insist that the players report for practice. The fine had to be injected into the rules to make the players report.

In four games played, Burns has scored two touchdowns, so it may be seen any sandlot backfield would hardly suffer in comparison.

To offset the absence of Parkinson and Uansa, Manager Smith has signed Al Dunn, and he is one of the finest triple-threat men coming down from Slippery Rock.

In the Olympic game, Sharkey will call signals from the fullback position, and the starting backfield will be Halpate at quarter, Dunn and Lutz at halfback, with Sharkey at fullback.

TO PLAY AKRON

On Sunday, the Burns club will go to Akron to meet the Awnings, and the following Sunday finds the McKeesport Olympics making the same trip.

Two big conference games are scheduled for Sunday. At the Bridgeville Speedway the Majestic Radios will give Panhandle fans a taste of conference football by meeting the McKeesport Olympics—and what a battle that will be! At the Quarry Stadium, West View will make an effort to keep its unbeaten record intact by meeting East Pittsburgh.

West View is a great drawing card, and the Red and White will have a hard battle against that fighting Blue and Gold team under the managerial wing of Joe Wambaugh.

Oliver to Battle Schenley Friday

On Friday Oliver High School's football team will lock horns with the husky eleven from Schenley at Malone Field. Oliver is out to avenge the defeats of former years. Oliver has never emerged victorious, thus far, but this time the Brighton road eleven is confident of victory. The recent defeat of Langley by Oliver has instilled this confidence.

EDDIE FOY EXONERATED

MISSOULA, Mont., Oct. 21.—(A.P.)—Nick Pozega, Deer Lodge boxer, died from an unknown cause, a coroner's jury decided here last night after inquiring into the youth's death during a fight here last Thursday. Eddie Foy, Chicago Negro, and Pozega's opponent in the fatal bout, was released from jail. Pozega collapsed in the eighth and final round.

MY FIFTY YEARS IN BASEBALL

By CONNIE MACK,

Manager, World Champion Philadelphia Athletics

INSTALLMENT NO. 38.

The season of 1923 was not very old when I began to get letters from Ira Thomas, the Shreveport manager, telling me about his young outfielder from Milwaukee named Al Simmons, who was knocking down fences in every park in the Texas League.

Connie Mack

He always added that the drawback for me was that Shreveport did not own the player. Had this not been the case, he would have seen that I had first refusal on him, but, unfortunately, this wonderful young hitter was owned by the Milwaukee club, of the American Association.

All that season I continued to hear from Thomas telling more about Simmons' uncommon batting coups. In the meantime, I had notified Mike Drennan, my scout, to look at him and Drennan sent a good report.

The key to the situation was President Otto Borchert, of the Milwaukee club. I knew it would be next to impossible to get him. Here was a Milwaukee boy sent out to get experience who was making all the fans in the Texas League buzz.

It was natural that Borchert would want this native son for his own club for a year or two. After that I would have to bid against the money bags of baseball for him.

FINALLY GETS SIMMONS

When I first broached the matter to Borchert he quickly snapped:

"Listen, I wouldn't part with this Milwaukee kid for all the money in the world. Think what he will mean to our gate! Born right here in Milwaukee, he will make our followers wild with his base hits. Now, if there is anybody else—"

I never thought I had a chance for Simmons, but I kept up this attack on Borchert. I found out in my talks with him that money itself was not the whole consideration. He was always talking about players.

Finally I carefully scanned my roster and once again went to Borchert for Simmons. My new offer was a good-sized wad of cash and six good players, at least on paper they looked certain to click in the American Association.

Borchert thought over the matter several days and then wired his acceptance, adding that it was the offered players and not the cash that most interested him.

I might add that Simmons joined the Milwaukee team after the Shreveport season closed, and batted .398 in 24 games. All Milwaukee fans ever saw of Simmons was in those few games and the 19 he played the previous fall.

Borchert had lost a player whom he could have sold for twice the money I paid in another season, but he was well recompensed for letting him come to me. He sold some of the players I sent him to major league clubs for big sums.

AL IMMEDIATE SUCCESS

Simmons' succes with the Athletics was immediate. Before the season was a few months old, he had Philadelphia fans all worked up.

Yet the first time any experienced baseball man or wise fan looked at Simmons, he would shake his head.

"He will never do," was the chorus.

Putting the foot in the bucket is the greatest sin a hitter can commit. It means that when he is about to swing and hit the ball he makes a step toward the bench with his left foot, if he is a right-handed hitter, and, therefore, does not get his full strength behind the ball.

All timid hitters, especially when a curve is thrown, pull away from the plate and put their foot in the bucket.

STANCE CRITICIZED

Simmons certainly put his foot in the bucket to some extent, but, nevertheless, his unorthodox style did not keep him from making base hits.

Going around the American League circuit in 1924, in every city where he made his first appearance, the critics quickly caught the flaw in his batting style and the inevitable observation would be made "that, while this new Athletic player, Simmons, made three hits, he put his foot in the bucket and consequently never would stay in the majors."

Philadelphia writers asked me if I would try to cure Simmons of this fatal defect in his make-up and save a promising young ball player from going to ruin.

I answered: "As long as he keeps on making base blows, Simmons can stand on his head at the plate if he chooses; I am not going to interfere."

I will say here that I never once tried to correct his style at the plate. To me Simmons seemed such a natural hitter that I hesitated to change his style and perhaps ruin him as a hitter.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO AL

Simmons still steps in the bucket, but no more is anything ever said about it. He is the only star hitter in baseball I ever heard of who violated this batting law.

I'll say here that I think Simmons is the mightiest right-handed hitter that ever lived, and I don't except Ed Delehanty, Hans Wagner nor Napoleon Lajoie.

That I was able to get him comparatively easy was because of his odd mannerism at the plate. When Simmons was batting .360 for Shreveport, the scouts of all other clubs passed him up as soon as they saw him step in the bucket.

CHICAGO BEGINS DRILLS

SAVOLDI EAGER TO TAKE SHOT AT PANTHERS

Staff Correspondent.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 21.—The People's Choice, otherwise Jumping Joe Savoldi, as colorful a football player, and possibly as good, as is cavorting on any gridiron this year, is rarin' to go against Pitt Saturday.

Jumpin' Joe hopped and skipped into prominence last year as an understudy for Moon Mullins at fullback for Notre Dame. Jumping Joe hails from Twin Oaks, Mich., being that town's gift to football. He's a great kid, with a lot of natural color and ability, and, now that he has gotten over his wild prep-school football notions, the dickens of a fine fullback.

Jumping Joe came to Notre Dame a prep-school star. He was one of those tough, rugged babies who thought interference was only a word you look up in the dictionary. When he first reported for practice here he used to pay little or no attention to anyone but Mr. Savoldi and the ball.

RAW MATERIAL

"Gimme that ball," he once cracked, "and let me go. I'll make that varsity club look like a lot of tramps."

Well, Rockne had to take Savoldi in hand. He did this, and for two years Savoldi was just another guy who took up space on the bench. He got into some games away late in the final period and, all in all, he was the last man in the world you'd have picked as a future all-American prospect.

Then, last year he got smart. He began following the interferers. He learned to pick his holes in the line and to smack 'em before they began to close. He learned to keep his feet, once he'd taken his first charge and he developed a fine side-step and straight-arm.

As a result, Jumpin' Joe leaped into the spotlight on Rockne's 1930 undefeated team. He scored a lot of points and he gave all opposition a tough time. He arrived, in other words, with as much class as any of 'em.

away with that phase of Marine Corps athletic activity is due to the fact that the money for the upkeep of the teams comes out of the recreational funds of the various posts, built up from profits made from the various service post exchanges.

On the West coast, in particular, it is pointed out, the San Diego Marines pay for the upkeep of a team they never even see in action, as its games are confined largely to the East Coast. If the All-Marine teams are abolished, the plan is to build up strong team at each of the three major Marine Corps posts—San Diego, Cal., Parris Island, S. C., and Quantico, Va.

Frankie Frederickson.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE release of Frankie Frederickson as manager of the former Pittsburgh hockey club, which has been transferred to Philadelphia, did not come as a surprise to local ice fans, as it had been understood for some time that whether the team played here or elsewhere during the 1930-31 season Frederickson would not be retained. It is believed that Frankie's successor will be Cooper Smeaton. When the latter resigned recently as referee in chief of the National League it was announced he would become a manager, and though no team was mentioned it is rumored that he will be made pilot of the erstwhile Pirates, who are now to be known as the Quakers. The club will open the season in Philadelphia on November 11 against the New York Rangers. Some changes in the lineup are planned, but it is denied that a deal will be made for Lionel Conacher, who has been supplanted as manager of the New York Americans by Eddie Gerard, former Ottawa skipper.

Here's How to Write a Talkiegram

Turn to the motion picture theater announcements in today's Sun-Telegraph, study the titles of the current attractions at the Pittsburgh theaters, then put a series of them together so that they will make a readable paragraph, with reasonably correct continuity. Use no less than five titles or more than eight.

Easy, simple, interesting and fascinating. There isn't a chance in the world of any two persons creating the identically same "Talkiegrams." It takes but little time and furnishes lots of fun.

MAYBE IT'S LOVE or JUST LOVE IN THE ROUGH, said MOBY DICK when he met SWEET KITTY BELLAIRE during the SINNER'S HOLIDAY but he looked for DANGER LIGHTS as THE DOUGH BOYS came into view and started THE BIG FIGHT.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

The SINNER'S HOLIDAY at MONTE CARLO is full of DANGER LIGHTS, but LOVE IN THE ROUGH had just as many hazards when THE DOUGH BOYS concluded to start THE BIG FIGHT and break up a ROMANCE.

THE BIG FIGHT began on HER WEDDING NIGHT when the lawyer FOR THE DEFENSE brought out the GOOD NEWS that the ROMANCE had started at MONTE CARLO during a SINNER'S HOLIDAY.

Perhaps you can write better "Talkiegrams" than these. Try it! It costs you nothing. The judges will award the prizes to entries selected as the most interesting. Brevity is essential. Write one or more if you wish. Have everyone in the family write one.

Address your "Talkiegrams" to TALKIEGRAM EDITOR, SUN-TELEGRAPH, P. O. Box 596, PITTSBURGH, PENN., and be sure to place the number on the lower lefthand outside corner of your envelope. Use the above "Talkiegram" form if you wish

Forbes

Philadelphia Campaign, 'Buy Now,' Is Timely

By B. C. FORBES

ALTHOUGH THIS writer could never become hilariously excited over such schemes as "shoeshine day" or "tripe week," the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce's "Buy Now" campaign is timely and thoroughly sensible because America's worst trouble now is psychological. The weakest thing in the country is not the stock market, not cotton or wheat or copper or rubber, but our state of mind.

Mr. Forbes

Therefore, what most urgently needs to be changed is our state of mind.

President Philip H. Gadsden's aggressive waging of Philadelphia's campaign, including his enlisting of the support of President Hoover, Gov. Fisher, President Alba B. Johnson, of Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce, is calculated to achieve tangible results.

CONSUMERS ARE NOT the only people who have allowed fear to curtail drastically their purchasing. Many letters come to this column complaining of inability to find desired goods in different kinds of retail stores. For example:

Wallace A. Miller writes:

"Producers and retailers are scared to manufacture and stock up. The buying public is getting disgusted. I got footsore tramping around looking for an appropriate solid brass letter box for my front door. I was told everywhere, 'We are all out of them and afraid to stock them.' I sought other things in retail stores, and not finding them, I've gone to wholesalers and manufacturers. But they are all afraid to do something. If that's the American spirit of business then it deserves to get the beating it is taking. What the ——— is the matter?"

A woman writes:

"When I complained to a shoestore manager about his not having either style or sizes, he admitted, 'We are buying very conservatively; we're afraid to stock up.' This store in the past always had plentiful selections."

I KNOW VERY rich men who have succumbed so abjectly to the prevailing mob psychology that they are cheese-pairing like misers. With pride, they relate how they have reduced the number of their servants, cut wages, reduced food and clothing expenditures, curtailed work on their estates, etc., etc.

This writer had drummed into him all through his boyhood and youth the value—the sacred value—of Spartan frugality and thrift. He still regards them as virtues when exercised rationally.

But when wealthy individuals and families, possessing more money than they will ever spend and more than is likely to prove a blessing to their children, choose a time like this to throw bread winners out of work and to exercise extreme niggardliness, they become despicable.

Corporations and other concerns strongly entrenched financially that have acted similarly are equally condemnable—as well as shortsighted. Every corporation abundantly able to do so should, rather, vote to distribute part of their unnecessarily large surplus in the form of extra dividends, and should also exercise courage and foresight in preparing for the prosperity which has always followed spasms of depression.

BUILDING HELD INDICATOR OF PROSPERITY

Too Little Attention Paid To Construction Increase, Government Experts Say

By MERRYLE R. RUKEYSER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—While at the capital I have had an opportunity to canvass the opinions about the business outlook of the brightest financial minds on the payroll of the federal government.

There is a reluctance to talk for quotation at this time, but some of the views expressed are too important and too timely to keep from the public at this critical period when the plain man is searching for guidance. Fundamental students of the economic cycle here believe too little attention is being paid to the improvement in September and thus far in October in residential building, which at length is responding to the tonic of cheap mortgage money and greatly reduced construction costs. Of course, the current statistics during the coming weeks will have to be studied with great care to determine whether the improvement is sustained or merely a temporary rally.

From the long range standpoint, it should be borne in mind that during the last era of prosperity residential building was the first important activity to crack under the strain of abnormally high interest rates. Residential building fell off a year before the decline in general building, and, as Clarence Woolley, sagacious head of the American Radiator Company, has pointed out, the downturn in residential building foreshadowed the letdown in general business which started in the summer of 1929.

BUILDING TREND

Those who believe that in the present depression the seeds of a new period of prosperity are being sown are impressed with the fact that new permits for residential building in September were up 6.5 per cent over August, and that the decline compared with the corresponding month a year ago was the smallest in 11 months. If this indicates a change in trend, it means that residential building, the first to decline, will also be among the first to recover. If the trend continues, it will constitute the early ingredients of business recovery. In the past, virtually every revival after depression got under way in precisely this manner. Residential building contracts awarded in the metropolitan district of New York during the first 10 days of October were at a higher daily rate than in either the preceding month or October of last year, according to the F. W. Dodge Corporation.

President Hoover has long thought that the key to revival would be found in stimulating residential building. Though individual sections may be overbuilt, Mr. Hoover has indicated that he does not think the country as a whole has enough good, modern homes. Incidentally, government officials point out that, though in some localities there may have been overbuilding of expensive apartment houses, hotels and office buildings, there is need of additional small homes to make up for the population growth of the last two years since residential building began to slump. The rise in permits takes three to six months before being reflected in increased employment.

Another high government official of unusual financial experience, who sees no immediate signs of recovery, thinks that prosperity will in time be restored through the accumulation of savings and the stimulus giver by new economic activities, such as electrification, radio and other new inventions.

PUBLIC ATTITUDE

Another executive, who brought a rich background of practical experience into public office, remarked:

"It is significant that the public is now irritable if you point out any favorable signs in the situation. A year and a half ago, when the reverse psychology was at work, the same people were irritable if you pointed out any adverse features. The public is making the mistake of projecting the present into the future.

"Marketwise, an illogical process is taking place. During prosperity when earnings of corporations were abnormally high, people were capitalizing them in stock prices by multiplying them by large figures, bringing the ratio 15 to 30 times earnings.. Now, when earning are temporarily abnormally depressed, there is a disposition to multiply present earnings by a smaller multiplier. This is the very reverse of sound investment procedure. When earnings are abnormally large, the multiplier should be reduced. When, as at present, earnings are temporarily abnormally low, the multiplier could be safely increased. Good commercial bankers, by the way of analogy, require a higher ratio of quick assets to quick liabilities in good times than in bad."

Financial experts in the government service pointed out that the public was overlooking the meaning of the recent drastic decline in brokers' loans, which indicates that stocks are passing from weak to strong hands. In other words, with cash, are taking the storks tossed overboard by marginal speculators, who had been holding them on borrowed funds.

Shorts Influence for Market Stability

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

A LARGE SHORT interest in a declining market exerts a powerful influence towards stabilization. This is a factor which frequently is forgotten when attacks are made against short selling of stocks.

The manner in which the broker for a trader on the short side borrows the stock to make delivery was explained in this column yesterday. Every short transaction must be covered. Sooner or later the borrowed stock must be returned by the broker who made the loan. This can only be accomplished by the trader placing a buying order so that his broker may have stock available to close the transaction.

While short sales originally tend to weaken a market, eventually they must exert a strengthening influence when short positions are covered through buying.

Declining Markets

PROFIT TAKING BY SHORTS is sometimes the only important stabilizing influence on declining markets. The short interest offers a reservoir of support which would not otherwise be available during periods of badly shaken confidence.

Individuals or corporations with the capital, as well as the courage, to buy stocks after a severe break in the market are rare. It is at such times that short profit taking steps in to perform a service for the market through supplying the buying strength to keep declines from reaching more severe proportions.

Bear Raids

THE SHORTS ARE MOST frequently criticised for the influence they have in bringing the upward movements of stocks to an end. The authorities of the New York Stock Exchange have taken a stand opposing the tactics of bear operators who throw stocks on the market in a deliberate effort to seriously break prices. The Exchange frequently conducts investigations when there appears to be evidence of bear raiding tactics. At times the organization disciplines members who have broken its rules on short sales.

Disregarding operations of the bear raid type, the activities of shorts when stocks are approaching peak levels may not be altogether harmful. Economists are in agreement on the fact that all forms of inflation eventually are followed by periods of deflation. The development of a short interest during periods of advancing prices is sometimes equivalent to putting the brakes on bull movements which are getting out of bounds.

Short Interest Small

THE SHORT INTEREST in the stock market is invariably smaller than the long interest. Until recently short operations were largely confined to professional traders and even at present the general public has shown little taste for any but the long side of the market.

The shorts are not sufficiently powerful, in the opinion of most students of the market, to force the prices of stocks down for any protracted period unless there is some justification for their belief that quotations are too high.

Except in the case of deliberate bear raids, the influence of the shorts appears to be one of the valuable factors determining the actual worth of stocks. Most brokers believe that the swings in the market would be wider if the short influence were to be withdrawn. Bull markets would go higher without the restraining influence of a few doubters of the belief that prices go up forever. On the other hand, when the inevitable breaks would come, they would be more severe since there would be no short covering to draw the reins on slumping markets.

The shorts may be considered as the safety valves of the market, protecting against excessive bull enthusiasm and against the utter panic of the bulls after the market has broken.

Cotton Situation Continues Better

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The cotton mill situation in the country has continued during the past week the irregular but definite upward trend which has been under way since early in the summer, the New York Cotton Exchange Service reports. The Service says it is believed that the total yardage of cloth sold the past week was in excess of the total current output, although this would not be true of all individual classes of goods.

SHARKEY EAGER FOR ACTION

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—(INS.)—Jack Sharkey, the Boston pugilist, is eager to fight Max Schmeling, W. L. (Young) Stribling—or anybody else—to definitely settle the question of who is the world's greatest boxer.

Sharkey wants to co-operate with the New York State Athletic Commission, the press and the public "in restoring the heavyweight boxing division to the standing it formerly held."

Buckley took a shot or two at Schmeling in his telegram to the commission.

"Sharkey, acting on the suggestion of your commission, agreed to meet Schmeling, German heavyweight, in a return contest," wired Buckley. "Schmeling's refusal to sign to box Sharkey again proves he knows his master. He realizes Sharkey can knock him out. Sharkey is willing to post any forfeit you name to meet Schmeling in New York state.

"Sharkey is also willing to defend his title as American heavyweight champion in New York against Young Stribling. He will follow any program of bouts your commission may decide on to determine who has the right to the heavyweight throne."

Goldberg, Former Panther Star, Secretly Married

Dick Goldberg, former University of Pittsburgh football player, and now practicing dentistry at New Kensington and coaching the Burns A. A., sent the following telegram to Jimmy Smith, manager of the Burns club, late yesterday afternoon.

"Take care of practice session tonight, have been married one year, but did not announce it before. Will be back Wednesday for the Olympic game. Dick."

A little investigation brought to light the fact that the former Beatrice Appel, of Kittanning, is now Mrs. Richard Goldberg.

Lone Star Head Says Earnings Are Steady

The Lone Star Gas Corporation was never in a more prosperous condition and estimated net earnings for the year 1930 should equal, if not exceed the net of last year, according to L. B. Denning, president of the company. The properties are in remarkable physical condition and the gas supply is abundant. Some of the new fields that have been acquired by the corporation have underlying values in gas that will endure for many years to come and they have not been scratched as yet.

"There is no serious agitation regarding either the franchise of the corporation or rates in Fort Worth, Tex., as rumors have had it in Pittsburgh," Mr. Denning said. "This statement applies also to any other distributing subsidiary of the Lone Star Gas Corporation."

MARKET DROPS ON NEW WAVE OF SELLING

Volume Not Large; List Shows Little Resistance; Westinghouse at '30 Low

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The stock market poked its head up at the beginning of the week only to be knocked down again by a fresh onslaught of selling today.

The selling was not in large volume, but the lists showed little resistance until it had been depressed close to the low levels of last week. Yesterday's rally had been so swift as to bring out further liquidation deferred for better prices, and had been too obviously the result of short covering to be convincing.

Westinghouse was a soft spot, dropping 8 points to a new low for the year, close to the minimum touched last November. Allied Chemical lost more of yesterday's 11-point advance. International Harvester reacted nearly as much, reaching a new low since the 1928 splitup. Shares losing 4 or more points included American Can, Eastman, Atchison, Safeway, Byers and Western Union, while United States Steel, American Telephone and Texas Corporation lost about 3, and a long list of prominent issues declined 2 or more. Oils and coppers broke to new lows.

EARNINGS DROP

The drop in Westinghouse was directly attributed to publication of its third quarterly earnings statement, showing net for the quarter of $1.12 a share, compared to the quarterly dividend requirement of $1.25. Although better earnings earlier in the year indicated that the year's dividend will be earned, and payment at the regular rate is regarded as assured, the statement was clearly disappointing.

Traders were anxious to see what sort of resistance would develop around the recent low levels before becoming active buyers.

Although the feeling is growing that the deflation must now be rather thoroughly completed in many stocks, investors appear to prefer awaiting a definite cyclical turn, buying at higher levels as the price of avoiding the possible unpleasantness of seeing their shares sell below the figures paid. Some observers point out that deflation of the high grade issues usually comes at the end of a bear market, just as they are usually the last to turn downward, at the end of a bull market.

The day's news was not wholly unfavorable, however. The gradual improvement in the cotton mill situation was reported as having progressed further in the past week. The head of International Business Machines said that his company was enjoying its best year. A few earnings statements for the third quarter were regarded as favorable.

NET LITTLE CHANGED

Chesapeake and Ohio reported net close to that of a year ago. Nickel Plate, however, earned only $1.31 a share on the 6 per cent preferred, against $6.96 a share on the common in the September quarter last year.

The weekly condition statement of reporting federal reserve member banks was disappointing to those who had looked for another large drop in loans against securities. A decline of $10,000,000 compared with a drop of $153,000,000 in brokers' loans during the same period, and a drop of $215,000,000 in bank loans against securities in the previous week. It was regarded as reassuring, however, that most of the remaining increase in bank loans against securities, over the figures of a year ago, is in New York, where the banks have a great surplus of idle funds, barring further drastic declines in share prices, any necessity of reducing these loans is not at the moment apparent.

The money marketw as a little easier, but the demand was negligible. Call money held officially at 2 per cent, while some maturities of time money were reduced ¾ of 1 per cent.

Odd-Lot Purchasers Active in Market

NEW YORK, Oct. 21. — Public buying of securities for investment purposes is achieving spectacular proportions. As an instance of the extent of this investment buying, partner of one of the big houses points to the fact that on Monday his firm made 1,046 individual transfers of stocks, of which 825 were in odd lots. The odd-lot transfers represented 15,910 shares of stock and the full lots 37,400 shares.

Magnavox Co. Wins Writ in Radio Suit

SAN FRANCISCO., Oct. 21.—(INS.)—The Magnavox Company, manufacturer of radio receivers, won an injunction here in Federal Court against the Grigsby-Grunow Company which is expected to involve several million dollars. The Magnavox Company charged patent rights infringements.

U. S. Circuit Judge A. E. St. Sure found that the Magnavox people are entitled to damages.

Gasoline Reduced At Twin Cities

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 21. — Larger companies have cut gasoline prices 1 cent effective today in Minneapolis and St. Paul. Independent dealers have not reduced nor has the cut extended outside the twin cities.

Liverpool Wheat Market.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 21.—The market was due ⅛ penny higher. Opened ⅛ to 1 pence up, and at 1:20 p. m. was up 2⅝ to 2¼ pence.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—Influenced by unlooked for sharp advances in Liverpool wheat quotations, all grain values here went higher early today. Statements credited to Chairman Legge of the Federal Farm Board that agricultural commodity prices had reached bottom, attracted much notice and so likewise did Liverpool reports that Russian offerings of wheat abroad were fewer and at higher prices. Opening ½ to 1¼c up, Chicago wheat future delivery contracts held near afterward to the initial range. Corn started unchanged to 1⅛c rise, and subsequently continued firm.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Small extensions of the Monday rally were followed by realising sales on the Curb today. The list absorbed the profit-taking rather diffidently and the easier tone to the list was utilized for the placing of some additional short lines.

DAILY TRUE STORY

S. W. A. K.

A well-kept, substantial appearing limousine stopped in front of my brother's house, or perhaps it hesitated, then up the driveway and stopped at the side door.

I recognized the driver and followed my brother around the veranda to where the car was.

"Hello there, Tommy Davis," I called out.

He stared at me for a moment and then came out of the car rather hesitatingly.

"You look—you must be Maude Kellogg," he said.

"Used to be, Tommy—Mrs. Dennison now," I said.

We shook hands. Tommy Davis had been in my class in school a considerable number of years ago.

My brother let us talk about old times for a few minutes. I hadn't been back to the old home for five years or more, and was making my brother a brief visit. Finally Joe—my brother—turned to Tommy Davis.

How about it, Swak?" he asked.

Tommy looked at me, hesitated, and then said, "Everything's fine, Mr. Kellogg. Just stopped to say hello."

Tommy seemed nervous. Brother Joe laughed heartily.

"Maude's all right, Swak—she'll probably get half a case to take home to her husband. Did you think she had turned into a White Ribboner?"

Tom Davis seemed rather sheepish.

Odd Nickname

My brother took two suit cases and Tommy Davis took two. Both went into the house. I followed them in. They opened the cases.

"I thought, Tommy, that you intended to be a doctor when you grew up," I said.

"Couldn't afford to study, Miss Kellogg—er—Mrs. Dennison."

"Look here, Swak," Joe said, "don't forget the supplies I ordered for our club banquet."

"Don't you worry, Mr. Kellogg—it's all ready to deliver now."

"What's that you kept calling him?"

"Swak."

"Swak?"

"Exactly."

"What a droll nickname—never heard it—it doesn't seem to make sense at all."

Joe's wife came out just then, in time to overhear this. She laughed and sat down beside me.

"But it does make sense, if you know about it," she said.

"What is a 'Swak?'" I demanded.

"Well, I never knew of but one Swak—Tommy Davis is it."

"And I'll tell you," Joe's wife said, "that this is the only inside thing about any of Joe's legal cases that he ever told me. It was so good he couldn't keep it. He doesn't violate the ethics of his profession—he wouldn't tell his clients' inside stories any more than a father confessor would tell things, only—er—"

Enters Into Business

"I'll have to tell her," Joe said, "so she will understand."

"Do. I'm all curiosity about 'Swak.'"

And my brother told me this:

Tommy Davis had to look about for something to do after he left high school. By that time you were in finishing school and then you met Dennison and that was your final finish, Sis, but Tommy wasn't so very aggressive and good jobs weren't plentiful. He managed to rent what had once been our thriving harness shop and he converted it into a poolroom and bowling alley.

I remarked that this didn't seem to be hitching his wagon to much of a star. My brother assured me that it managed to provide Tommy with a living and enabled him to care for his widowed mother.

Being rather desperate, Tommy began to provide a few drinks for such of the patrons as he could trust. This paid him much better. For several years he went along, unmolested. Finally he learned just where to pass out a little monthly protection money and everything went merrily along.

He paid off the mortgage. His mother died and he found himself alone. He also found that he didn't want to quit selling the stuff because he liked the money it made.

Tommy got his liquors from Paul Bianco, over at Westwark. Bianco came through with it in various ways, fruit carts, furniture trucks and the like. They didn't trust telephones. Tommy would drop Bianco a friendly line and at the close he would add the initials of what he wanted, such as R. G. C. or perhaps A. S. B. This meant, to Bianco, Rye, Gin and Corn, or Apple, Scotch, Brandy.

When Bianco died Tommy was up against it for a week or so, not knowing any bootlegger he could trust. Finally he went to Westwark and visited the Bianco home. He thought one or more of the drivers might have been Bianco's sons and would be carrying on the business. He found Mrs. Bianco, a cheerful, buxom, black-eyed widow with six small children, two sets of twins and two "one-at-a-timers" as Tommy explained. Mrs. Bianco wasn't more than 22 then.

She assured him that, with the aid of a cousin, she was carrying on the business as usual. Tommy gave a verbal order, and came back home.

When that was getting low, Tommy resorted to the old custom of sending what seemed to be an informal, friendly note. He wrote:

Dear Mrs. Bianco — Enjoyed my visit. Trust you and the nice kiddies are all well. Hope to see you soon.

"S. W. A. K.

"TOMMY DAVIS."

Receives Letter

I know about this, my brother explained, because I saw all of these notes.

He got a note right back:

"Dear Tommy—come soon—would love to see you.

"S. W. A. K.

"TESSA BIANCO."

In a few days Tessa Bianco came over to our town and called on Tommy. She went into his little private office and hugged him and gave him a big kiss before he knew what was coming.

"When we shall marry—so soon, eh?" she asked, still hugging him.

"Why—er—er—"

Before he stopped stammering, the fair and fat Tessa kissed him again and made him promise to call on her the next day. Tommy went over. From that call he beat it back and called on me to help him.

He told me about the letters and about all that had happened. I knew that the widow Bianco was worth a pretty big pot of money. I knew some other things, also.

"Tommy, you marry her," I advised.

"Gosh, I don't want to marry—she can't sue me for breach of promise—I never proposed to her," he protested.

"Pretty near to it," I insisted.

"I never spoke first about marriage, not a word," he insisted.

"Pretty near to it, when you wrote her a sweet note and put 'S. W. A. K.' on it."

"Aw, that's nothing to do with marriage — that means I want Scotch Whisky, Applejack and Kummel," Tommy declared.

"Yeah? Well, it also means 'Sealed With A Kiss'—you better marry her," I advised.

"And he did. He's running the bootleg business, has got 10 times more money than I'll ever get, but to me he will always be just "Swak" Davis!"

—Little Lady.

Ans.—It's advisable for a lotta brides to wear veils right up until the ceremony is over with. And I might add, and if I am wrong I hope someone will correct me, that it would be a good idear for brides to wear veils during the breakfast hour thereafter.

THE PERFECT HOST

(New York World.)

HE NEVER SLEEPS

Washington Monument, Washington, D. C.

Gentlemen:

It has been brought to my attention that a great deal of unemployment exists at this moment in our country. This is due... well, the fact is, it is due to wide-spread economic forces entirely beyond my control, as well as the stock market crash which I predicted in a private conversation as early as 1908.

But that is neither here nor there, the country in its anguish cries out for a remedy! And without a moment's hesitation, Horace D. Frisby has a remedy.

If President Hoover will press a button discontinuing the telephone service all over the country, I will personally take it upon myself to organize a messenger service composed entirely of the unemployed. Persons wishing to communicate with other persons will merely write whatever they have to say on a standard postal card with my picture on the back and mail it to the nearest Frisby headquarters. The message will then be delivered as soon as I get around to it, for a small service fee. In a very short time, according to my figures, this should go far toward making present conditions seem as perfect as could be expected.

Very truly yours,

Horace B. Frisby.

"Buy Now!"

Philadelphia Has Started a Movement Which, If It Spreads, May Quickly Restore Prosperity.

The spending or not spending of a dollar a week per capita is said to represent the margin in the United States between prosperity and hard times.

Acting on that theory, Philadelphia launched yesterday a campaign of four weeks to stimulate retail purchasing. The movement was sponsored by the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce and has been indorsed by the Federation of Women's Clubs and other organizations.

In shop window cards, street car advertisements, posters, movies and radio broadcasts people are told to "Buy Now!"

Gov. Fisher and Alba B. Johnson, president of the State Chamber of Commerce, have been asked to make it a statewide movement, that Pennsylvania may be first to get back to normal business conditions.

Certainly there is advantage in buying now. Prices of many commodities are the lowest they have been since before the war.

Money is plentiful, but people appear to be depositing it in banks instead of making their customary expenditures. Pittsburgh bank deposits, in common with those elsewhere, have shown a phenomenal increase, and are now at the highest mark in their history.

Diamond Jubilee

Pennsylvania State College Has Cause for Pride on its Seventy-fifth Anniversary.

Pennsylvania State College is celebrating this week the 75th aniversary of its founding. The college ordinarily has more students from Allegheny County than from any other county, and we believe a multitude of Pittsburghers will be interested in learning something about its progress.

A few years ago things looked black at State College. The Legislature had been niggardly in its appropriations, and thousands of applicants for admission had to be turned away because there was no room for them. An attempt was made to raise money through a state bond issue, but the voters disapproved it.

Thanks to the alumni and to agricultural and other organizations which took up the burden that the Commonwealth shirked, 12 new buildings have been erected, including a group of architecturally beautiful dormitories. They are to be opened to the public during the commemorative exercises Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The college proudly claims that all Pennsylvania is its campus, and no one familiar with the research work in which it is engaged for the benefit of Pennsylvania's industries will dispute the claim.

Procrastination Again!

Our Besetting Sin Is Manifested In Autoists' Delay In Having Their Cars Inspected.

Procrastination—putting off until tomorrow civic duties that would be better done today—seems to be our besetting sin.

Half a dozen times a year we see evidences of it. We see it in the crowds in the Federal Building on the last day for payment of income tax, in the crowds in the County Treasurer's office on the last day for payment of county taxes, in the crowds at the polling places on the last day for registration, in the embarrassed autoists on the last day of the year who have delayed getting their licenses for the new year.

It is called to our attention again by the announcement that more than a million Pennsylvania automobile owners have not yet had their cars inspected, as required by law.

The "O. K." sticker must be obtained before November 1. Warning comes from Harrisburg that the State Highway Patrol, assisted by municipal police, will make informations on November 1 against drivers of all uninspected cars, and that on conviction they will be fined $10 and costs.

It is no more difficult to have one's car inspected now than on October 31.

The Billboard Nuisance

At its recent meeting in Pittsburgh the Pennsylvania Federation of Garden Clubs gave considerable attention to the subject of billboards alongside the highways. The consensus of the organization, composed largely of women, was that billboards are marring our scenery and in that respect, at least, are a nuisance.

In some locations, of course, billboards serve a useful purpose, and none but a fanatic would advocate their complete abolition. But there will be few to disagree with the Garden Clubs' contention that they should not be erected at points where they interfere with the view of an attractive landscape.

The Federation now reports that it has received cordial cooperation from the State Constabulary and the Department of Forests and Waters in its campaign to remove unlawful billboards. It is a commendable campaign.

The Federation proposes that a law be passed taxing billboards and requiring that they be set back 100 feet from highways. That may or may not be desirable; but it is to be hoped the Legislature will give it careful consideration. New Jersey has such a law.

What's The Matter With Me?

We'll soon be in a pretty pass
If we don't shun that looking glass,
Let's tear ourselves away from it

Wandering Boys

Social affairs are now judged by the number of prominent citizens able to be absent.

Owing to the excessive fermentation in cash registers and the acidity in trial balances, a lot of our leading lights are hiding under bushels.

Bankers, brokers and judges are taking their foot in their hand, nor standing upon the order of their jayhopping.

They have disappeared like larvae in kerosene. They have evaporated like fumes up an airshaft. The old castle is no longer haunted because the ghost refused to renew its lease.

One New York judge has been missing 70 days, man and boy. He may be in a hollow tree, but we guarantee he isn't living on berries.

Wherever he is, there is room service. But he ain't coming back because it would fracture his dignity.

After once having tasted the power of judgeship he refuses to become a replaced divot.

The power of the law has changed recently. It used to be direct. Now it's alternating.

A broker took an airplane flight two weeks ago and they haven't seen hide nor feather of him since. He isn't like Conan Doyle because he didn't promise to write.

He may be gone where the woodbine twineth and the grass is evergreen. He took along his own money.

One banker had watched his hat so closely in restaurants that he continued the habit in the bank.

They discovered that this board was holding meetings 75 times a day. Boys, that ain't bad in this kind of market.

Houdini used to make an elephant disappear and that was all right. But when a kangaroo disappears we wonder what it's got hidden in it's pouch.

JULES VERNE

By Archibald Henderson

In all ages, we have had prophets of science, forerunners who in imagination foretell the future. Edward Bellamy astounded the last generation with "Looking Backward." Wells has astounded ours with his visions of the coming age. Today Haldane and his copyist, the late Lord Birkenhead, foretell the scientific marvels of the twenty-first century. Guesses are free; and if the guesses never come true, at least the guesser will not be alive to know it.

The most fascinating and ingenious of all these foretellers of future scientific wonders was the late Jules Verne. Like Haldane, he was scientifically trained; although not a scientist by profession, as is Haldane, Verne made a far-ranging study of scientific principles and discoveries; and his magnificent hunches were soundly based, for the most part, on established scientific data. He was a novelist by profession; but today he is honored as a prophet of undersea navigation, of aviation and of ballistics.

Only recently, Prof. Richet, of the Institut de France, paid high tribute to Jules Verne before the French Geographical Society. It was not the imaginative artist he took occasion to praise, but the prophet of aeronautical science. Verne not only foresaw the airplane and the dirigible, but also the helicopter. Fifty years ago aeronautical science received a great impetus from the imaginative novels of Verne, especially from his imaginative creation, the flying machine to which he gave the name of Albatross.

These were by no means the dark ages in aeronautical history when Verne began to write of future scientific marvels. Lilienthal, a famous name in the history of aviation, and others were making hair-raising experiments with gliders. It was an era of enthusiastic experimentation. A little later (to be precise, in 1886) Verne published his fascinating little book "Robur le Conquerant."

It was the fruit of prolonged studies of the possibilities of mechanical flight. In the book is described a contest between advocates of two types of aircraft—heavier than air and lighter than air. This is a contest which is going on, with many thrilling incidents, all round us today. Verne stages a contest between the Albatross, and a dirigible called the Go-Ahead. Verne concluded, as Coste concludes, that "as to the future of aerial locomotion, it belongs to the airship (airplane), not to the aerostat (dirigible)."

Verne filled his books with ingenious scientific explanations and mathematical calculations, and glibly glosses over the difficulties which have not yet been surmounted. The authorities which he cites show his extensive reading regarding the problem of flight. He ranges from the classic Archytas, inventor of the kite, to Leonardo da Vinci, from Cayley and Stringfellow to Hension and Edison.

The Albatross was an ingenious aircraft, containing basic features of the modern multi-motored airplane. The motive power was not gasoline, but electricity. Fascinated by the achievements of Edison, Verne went so far as to say: "Electricity will one day be the soul of the industrial world"—an astoundingly accurate prophecy.

The mechanism employed on the Albatross is in well-established use today, or in process of adoption and perfection for general air travel. There was the propeller in the rear, which pushed the plane; and in front the tractor airscrew. These mechanical devices gave the Albatross motion in a horizontal direction. For movement in a vertical direction the Albatross employed the helicopter principle. Verne defined the helicopter as "propellers on vertical axes." Thus the Albatross, with this device, anticipated the autogiro of today. Although Verne cannot be said to have contributed specifically by inventions to aeronautics, he opened the eyes and dilated the minds of men with vast possibilities for the future. As T. J. C. Martyn says, he sowed the seeds of airmindedness.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Remember when you were 6 and always asking questions? What a pest you were to your exasperated elders! But how could you face your amazing new world without asking questions about its wonders and mysteries? And what had happened to them that they were no longer curious and excited?

And then again, when you were 16—that maddening, muddled age of 16. Asking more questions than ever, but this time with a new slant. Doubting, debating, defying the status quo. You certainly made a nuisance of yourself, with your half-baked notions. But how much more colorful your life might have been if anyone had understood those doubts and encouraged that defiance. But, of course, no one did. Instead, they frowned on you—acted as if doubting and debating were a crime. So you learned to conform and accept things as they are. And now you're just like everyone else. In fact, you, too, have probably come to regard people who aren't like everyone else as "nuts."

"Thinking like everyone else"—that's the gravest charge the older nations bring against Americans. They say we're stereotyped, a bunch of Babbits—we who were once the outstanding individualists of the world. Stand-patters, afraid to be different, resentful of criticism, suspicious of experiment, how do we get that way? Prof. Robert E. Rogers, instructor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, believes we get that way because we're educated by women teachers.

"Our boys and girls," says he, "have not been taught to think . . . they have been taught not to criticize or analyze. Whose fault is it? I will hazard one unpopular guess. For half a century now the largest part of our young people have been trained exclusively by women teachers. The faults I have been speaking of are the faults of women teachers; preoccupation with method, interest in detail, insistence on discipline . . . an inclination to insist on abstract beliefs to be accepted docilely, rather than the free give-and-take of criticism."

In other words, the old "don't ask questions" attitude.

The average woman, particularly the woman teacher, detests criticism and debate. It messes things up so. Imperils her dignity and exposes her ignorance. She's afraid of ridicule and she detests disorder. Debates and experiments get everything upset. She wants a life that's in order. A place for everything and everything in its place. And everything CAN be put in its place so quickly and so pleasantly if we'll all agree not to question and doubt and just accept things as they're given us.

"Don't ask questions!"—that's the unwritten law in every school room. And even if Teacher personally doesn't believe in it, the school board does. Try and promote a little frank discussion of American history and see how long your teacher's certificate lasts. Or criticize our existing institutions and watch your stock go down with the local Rotary Club.

And so America, once the haven of rebels, the promoter of "Freedom of Speech," has become the great Don't-Ask-Questions Land.

Isn't It So?

Divorce is all that prevents marriage from being a failure.

It is much better to live up to your ideals than to have them live down to you.

It's all right to look ahead, but many a man has wasted his past while dreaming of the future.

There are few things in life more difficult of accomplishment than for a girl to look intellectual while she is chewing gum.

Text For Today

And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose.—Romans, viii:28.

(The text for today is suggested by the Rev. G. E. Swoyer, pastor, Mt. Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church, North Side.)

Think It Over

Drawn By Hal Coffman.

Like a double file of gunmen—our modern equivalent for the Red Indians—these sinister figures stand ready to make you run the gauntlet each pay day.

You MAY squeeze through to the bank and safety, but more likely you will be caught and "scalped" before you are fairly started.

"Something for Nothing," "Take a Chance," "Worthless Stocks," "Sure Thing"—these stand waiting for you, clutching at you, going through your pockets, blocking your progress.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Hope Hampton has returned to Aw-meerika a trifle triumphant, following a distinct measure of success in operatic circles abroad. There are reliable whisperings of her possible appearance next year at Covent Garden, also in Berlin, Vienna and at the Paris opera.

Thus has the Titian haired lady had revenge on tittering Broadway where her name often inspired a sly wink. Of her talents I cannot speak, having never seen her on screen, theatrical or operatic stage. She strikes one as pretty in the baby doll manner and the times I've seen her in public displayed lady-like decorum.

For many years she and her gray-haired, eagle-like husband, Jules Brulatour, who amassed millions in the raw film business, have been omniscient at the opera, first nights, Mayfair club dances and in smart cafes. At such events Miss Hampton's frocks inspired admiring gasps of lorgnette lifters.

They dwell in a palatial home on the upper avenue and have followed the social migrations to Palm Beach and the French Riviera. Brulatour is out of New Orleans of French extraction and is reputed to have lavished incredible amounts to make his wife a fixture in the film firmament.

It is authoritatively told she inspired as much fan mail as Mary Pickford in her palmiest period, yet never clicked cinematically in a big way. Several years ago she began to study voice, but on the eve of starring in a musical production something happened. Production was mysteriously abandoned.

Later she did appear in light opera—"Madam Pompadour" if memory serves—in which she won personal praise, but the opus was short-lived. Broadway spawned another chuckle, whispering "Finis!" But Miss Hampton kept studying music and languages quite unperturbed.

She is now proficient in German, Italian and French. Should she arrive finally at the Metropolitan, as thick rumors hint, victory over the shoulder shruggers will be strictly Laura Jean Libbey. As the legend runs, she is a modern Cinderella who once answered the cry of "Cash!" in a Philadelphia department store.

Folks out at the whistle-stops could not afford the high priced movie but could stand the rep show tariff the past season. Thus, "Hell on the Border," a tent favorite, netted $12,000 for a producer playing one night stands.

For years ten-twent-thirt troupers of tent and rep shows have been the butt of Broadway wise-cracks. But in the economic crisis they fared far better than many of their brothers and sisters on Broadway.

A rep show, playing George M. Cohan comedies in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky, netted enough for a jobless Broadway press agent to rent a house for the winter in Florida and purchase an auto besides. A dozen fairly well known actors, under pseudonyms, have been taking flyers in rep shows until clouds scatter. One actress, used to $750 a week, toured Missouri and Illinois for $35 a week and "cakes."

The world will lose a pronounced theatrical tint if movies and radio totally obscure the tent and rep shows. The star, with his moth-eaten fur-collared coat, the manager with noisy vest and sparkler, the frizzed blonde juvenile, the lantern-jawed character man "who trouped with Booth," offered stability in an all-too-quickly-changing universe.

A fat lady leaning out a fourth story window far over on East 39th street was rattling away in Italian to a young girl on the sidewalk below. The girl slowly twisting a toe in the asphalt finally glanced up, delivered a laconic "O. K. Ma!" and slowly shuffled away. New York!

Charles B. Driscoll has so frequently flushed red asking New Yorkers about their wives, only to learn they have been divorced. Now he beams: "How are the folks?"

* * *

Just last week I called up a gentleman to ask him and his wife to dinner. "She is in Reno," he said. And all I could think up to say was: "I hope she has a good time."

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

The Very Best Way

There is only one path we must take;
There is only one test we can make.
With each task which we do
We must ask when it's through,
Have we put all our forces at stake?

Have we labored with heart and with hand,
Using all the gifts ours to command;
Have we valiantly sought,
Have we patiently wrought
For the good of the work we have planned?

Then each day when the sunlight has paled
It is not: Have we won, have we failed
As men measure success?
But instead: Through life's stress
Has our trust and our courage prevailed?

We must ask at the ending of day,
When the shadows of twilight are gray,
Of each toil and each scheme,
Of each dear plan and dream,
Have we shaped it the very best way?

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Some wives think they have model husbands and perhaps a few have them. Those who feel so blessed desire to make known the fact. Sometimes their statements are amusing to those who hear them. The so-called model husband may be far from filling that role. He may have been able to keep his wife from knowing where, how and when he has fallen short of her good opinion.

To be a good average is about all that can be expected by those who realize the frailties of mankind.

So the wife who tries to prove her husband far superior to men in general is undertaking a big job and a big laugh goes around at her expense.

If you don't want to be the cause of a hidden snicker don't praise your husband so much, for most folk know he is not really above reproach in the sense you indicate and those who know his weaknesses are naturally amused.

Your husband does not think of himself as being near perfect; he knows he falls below that mark.
